Agriculture Pay Hinges on Vote In House Today

McNary Supports Roosevelt Stand On Parity Prices; Predicts Victory

House action today on a resolution from the Senate may determine whether the Agriculture Department's 89,000 employes will have their scheduled full payday Wednesday.

But House action remained a question last night as the farm bloc showed no signs of retreating from its position that a ban on sales of Government-held grain at less than parity prices must be linked with the funds in the big farm bill for the current fiscal year already five days underway.

'Broke' Since June 30

The resolution, drafted by a Senate Appropriatons Subcommittee for presentation today to the full committee, would permit the Agriculture Department, fundless since the end of the last fiscal year, June 30, to spend close to 100 million dollars in July while House and Senate continue seeking a solution of their dispute over parity sales.

Senate Minority Leader McNary of Oregon yesterday told the Associated Press he is backing President Roosevelt's demand for authority to sell grain for feed purposes at less than parity, and predicted that House opposition to the Senate-approved provision would collapse. However, no such word came from those House leaders who have led the fight for full parity prices for all grains.

House Leaders Adamant

Representative Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, and Representative Tarver (Democrat) of Georgia, another farm bloc leader, promptly rejected the Senate Subcommittee's "compromise" resolution on Saturday. Both scoffed at views that the House might accept it in place of the House voted resolution, rejected by the Senate, to permit continued interim spending by the Agriculture Department but carrying also the ban on proposed sale of 125 million bushels of wheat at 85 per cent of the parity price for corn.

The House originally voted the ban into the supply bill carrying 680 million dollars for the Agriculture Department, beginning July 1, but the Senate approved the measure without the ban. The bill has since been in conference.

Appointment of new conferees in the next few days to represent the House in the negotiations has been suggested, but no open approval of the proposal has come from the leadership.

It was considered probable that President Roosevelt again would

Suzy, well-known orangutan, died yesterday in her cage at the National Zoo after a day's illness.

The attractive young red-haired simian, a resident of the Zoo since she was brought here from Sumatra 12 years ago as an infant, lost her appetite Saturday and steadily lost weight until her demise.

A keeper who entered her cage at 11 a. m. as she sat propped against the frame of an inner door found that Suzy had expired. To avoid a disturbance among spectators, her body was left

Rubber Appeal Stressed as Gas Sign-up Nears

Registration Starts Thursday at 28 Schools in District

Plans for registration of motorists this week for permanent gasoline ration books remained unchanged last night as citizens, mindful of the urgent need for rubber, were exhorted to redouble their efforts to "build the Nation's stockpile high enough to assure us victory."

Gas registration will begin Thursday in 28 District schools where approximately 2400 registrars will be on hand to speed completion of a task believed much less formidable than that of the first registration. Most of the registrars will be public school teachers and the others will be drawn from the ranks of volunteers.

Only "A" books will be issued, and since commercial operators will be required to get their books from local ration boards, Lawson J. Cantrell, in charge of the registration, said he believed not more than 125,000 motorists will be handled at the schools.

Registration hours are from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m. on Thursday and Friday and from 7 a. m. to 1 p. m. on Saturday.

The plea for greater cooperation in the rubber campaign came from William R. Boyd, jr., chairman of the Petroleum Industry War Council, who also urged a half-day holiday throughout the Nation as a means of speeding up the drive. He suggested that the closing of stores, offices and nondefense plants "so

Birth Certificates No Longer Needed By War Workers

Birth certificates to prove American citizenship no longer will be required of persons who seek jobs at war plants where secret or confidential Government work is done, War Manpower Chairman Paul V. McNutt announced yesterday.

A simple declaration by the applicant that he is a citizen, signed by him in the presence of an Army or Navy plant protection representative, will suffice.

This new procedure was developed by the WMC and the U. S. Employment Service because so many valuable man hours of production were being lost by difficulties and delays in obtaining birth certificates, McNutt said.

Workers who misrepresent in their applications face a fine of $10,000, five years in prison, or both.

Gen. Dargue's Body Found in Snow Of High Sierras

Bishop, Calif., July 5 (INS).—The bodies of Maj. Gen. Herbert Dargue, Mitchel Field, Long Island, and Capt. James Leavitt, March Field, who were killed in the crash of their Army transport plane last December 12, have been recovered from the snow and ice of the high Sierras, Army searchers announced tonight.

The discovery of their bodies less than 100 yards from the wreckage of the plane, in which four other officers and two enlisted men died, left but one body to be located, that of Sergt. Stephen Hoffman of Charleroi, Pa.

General Dargue was commanding general of the first air force.

OPA Orders Men's Wear Price Slash

'Unworkable'

To Halt Rise

By Felix Cotten
International News Service Staff Writer

Substantial reductions in prices charged by many wholesalers and manufacturers for men's and boys' clothing were ordered last night by Price Administrator Leon Henderson in an effort to freeze retail prices solidly at the levels of last March.

Henderson directed a large section of the Nation's vast manufacturing and wholesale trade in these articles, effective next Saturday, to cut back their prices to what they were charging during specified time periods long before last March.

"Base Prices" Established

These prices will be their "base" prices. They are permitted to add to them percentage mark-ups to take care of increased costs of labor, materials and other items that have occurred since the base periods.

The object of this move is to make the overall price ceiling, fixed at the March maximums for most of the things the American public buys, stick with respect to men's and boys' suits, topcoats, overcoats, separate sport and slack coats, short pants, knicker or golf pants, long pants and separate vests.

Beginning next Saturday, it will be a violation of the price control act to sell, buy, offer or deliver these articles at prices higher than the ceilings fixed in the new order. To escape the penalties of the act, goods must be delivered to a common carrier for shipment to a buyer before Saturday.

Strikes at Speculators

Henderson said the reduction in prices were ordered to eliminate "the unwarranted and speculative increases made by a few manufacturers," to restore a normal relationship between prices charged by different manufacturers, and to afford relief to certain manufacturers who did not boost prices.

Owing to an unusual demand, and a reduced wool supply, he said, prices of men's and boys' clothing advanced sharply from the fall of 1941 to March, 1942. The advance was greater in manufacturers' and wholesalers' prices than in retail prices, so that it is necessary to cut back the former prices in many cases to enable retailers to continue to sell at March levels "without deteriorating quality."

Retailers Affected

However, base period prices antedating last March are fixed in the new order, not merely for sales by manufacturers and wholesalers, but for overcoats and topcoats sold by retailers, and for all "tailored to the trade" and "made to measure" clothing.

In the case of these articles also, percentage mark-ups are allowed above base period prices. But the effect will be price reductions for the articles in many instances, just as for manufacturers' and wholesalers' prices.

Women to Get Price Data For Stores at Rally Today

Approximately 700 women will meet at 10 a. m. today in the Departmental Auditorium to get final instructions on a wartime job—the delivery of OPA price ceiling booklets to 7000 local retailers on Wednesday.

The call for volunteers for the delivery duty, made through the District Civilian Defense Office, produced a rapid-fire response. Mrs. Charlotte Warner, chairman of the consumer interests committee, reported 600 volunteers yesterday and others were registering at 1212 Eleventh Street Northwest, committee headquarters. The registrations will continue until Wednesday.

District Commissioner Charles Kutz, first deputy coordinator for civilian defense here, will address the volunteers today at the auditorium, located on Constitution Avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth Streets Northwest. The Office of Price Administration will send a representative. Jonathan Daniels will speak for the Civilian Mobilization Division of the OCD. Col. Lemuel Bolles, Director of Civilian Defense here, and Whitney Leary, OPA administrator for the District, are expected to speak.

The volunteers, it was said yesterday, were recruited through various organizations and out of the volunteer bureau of the Civilian Defense Office. It is planned that each volunteer shall have only about 10 of her neighborhood stores to visit. They are not required to ask or answer questions, but simply to give the store owner or manager the booklets on prices.

"The object," it was said, "is to get the information into the hands of every one of our patriotic merchants in a friendly way through their customers."

New American Force in China Blasts at Enemy Supply Centers

By Robert P. Martin
United Press Staff Writer

Chungking, July 5.—The new United States Army Air Force in China has blasted important Japanese airdromes and waterfront targets around Hankow and Nanchang in its first major bombing expedition, it was revealed tonight.

Hankow, 585 miles up the Yangtze from Shanghai, and Wuchang, directly across the river from it, are centers of important Japanese water operations for the central China area. Japanese destroyers, gunboats and freighters unloading war supplies usually are anchored off Hankow.

The bombing attack was synchronized with yesterday's initial operations by the newly reorganized United States fighter command, into which the veteran American Volunteer Group pilots were inducted. The fighters shot down five Jap planes over Hengyang, Hunan Province, and helped Chinese fighters drive off Jap raiders from Kweilin, capital of South China's Kwangsi Province. [An Associated Press dispatch said the Flying Tigers had shot down six planes.]

Main Jap Operational Centers

Both the bomber and fighter operations occurred while Americans at home were celebrating Independence Day. First reports said the results achieved over a new, 500-mile American sky front were "excellent." It was estimated unofficially that since July 1 the A. V. G. and United States Army fighters, now merged into one unit, have destroyed 25 Japanese planes.

The Central News Agency reported that Chinese guerillas on June 28 sank a Japanese transport on the Yangtze River below Nanking. One hundred of the enemy drowned, it added. The next day, the Japanese garrison at Kiukiang, directly north of Nanchang, crossed the river, occupied Hwangmei, 40 miles above it, and pressed northward against guerilla forces.

In dropping "calling cards" at Nanchang, the American bombers were giving direct assistance to the Chinese armies battling to the southeast.

From the bombed airfield at Hankow, Japanese planes have

Temperature Drop Lets Heat-Weary D. C. Slumber

Washington's warm spell subsided appreciably last night, dropping 13 degrees in eight hours and affording relief to thousands who the night before had found sleep a most trying, if not impossible, task.

From a high of 88 degrees at 2:30 p. m. yesterday, the mercury had dropped by 10 p. m. to 75.

But the balmy afternoon and evening found streets and highways strangely quiet. Motorists who ordinarily would have gotten out the family car to take advantage of the pleasant atmosphere found the pinch of gas rationing too much for them. Instead, they strolled along downtown sidewalks, in the parks and beside the river at Hains Point.

Churchill Pledges Chinese All Aid In Sixth War Year

Chungking, July 5 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill told the Chinese people today as they neared the end of five years of war that Britain is determined to give them "every material, moral and spiritual help in our power."

"For five years you have, in spite of suffering and disappointment, maintained a united front against aggression," the British leader said.

"Today we are fighting side by side against our common enemies and with us today we have the tremendous resources of the United States. Each of us has his part to play. The war in Europe and the Middle East is as much a part of the defense of China as the war in the Far East is part of the defense of Britain."

Reds Checking Main Drive, Holding Firm In Kursk Sector

By Henry Shapiro
United Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Monday), July 6.—Outnumbered Russian troops are beating back incessant German attacks east of Kursk and checking a mammoth spearhead aimed at the Don River, but farther south on the blazing 150-mile front the enemy has driven new wedges into the Soviet lines, the Red army announced today.

It said that in the last week of great air battles up and down the Russian front, the Red air force had downed 380 German planes while losing 187.

Earlier dispatches told of German armies smashing eastward behind armored spearheads toward the Soviet rail and water life lines to the Caucasus, overwhelming bitter resistance in some sectors by weight of numbers and prodigal expenditure of men and machines.

New Kalinin Front Drive

[An Associated Press dispatch said the Germans were using more than 150,000 men in the Kursk offensive.]

"In the Kursk direction our troops are repelling continuous German assaults," the midnight communique of the high command said: "The enemy is suffering enormous losses and is bringing up reinforcements."

It acknowledged, however, that the massive pounding of German tank, infantry and air forces had gouged fresh gaps in Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's lines east of Belgorod. Adolf Hitler was reported throwing every ounce of available might into the southern offensive in an attempt to cut Soviet communications and clear the way for a drive on the oil wealth of the Caucasus.

Meanwhile a new German offensive on the Kalinin front northwest of Moscow, into which Hitler hurled several armored and motorized divisions, was described as less successful.

Timoshenko's 'Stalling'

The high command, in its first recognition of the new front, said the Red army recaptured two inhabited localities which the Germans had wrested from it in furious onslaughts by strong tank and infantry forces.

"Sunday in the Kursk direction our troops battled enemy tanks and

20-Month-Old Child Killed, 4 Hurt in Crash

Deaths this date last year 42
District total last year 95

An automobile collision at First and K Streets Northeast early yesterday caused the District's fifty-seventh traffic death of the year and sent four other occupants of the cars to hospitals.

Victim of the crash was a 20-month-old Negro child, McKinley Powell, who was in one of the cars, driven, according to police, by his uncle, Gaston Powell of 5208 Dix Street Northeast. Also in Powell's car, police said, were Mattie Powell, 29, the child's mother, and Daniel Powell, 29, the father, of 2507 M Street Northeast. The latter was admitted to Casualty Hospital for a knee injury but the mother was sent home after treatment.

Occupants of the other car injured in the crash were Shirley McCabe, 19, and Ruth McCabe, 17, both of 3447 Eads Street Northeast. They were treated at Providence Hospital for minor injuries and sent home. Wendell S. Metts, 21, of 813 Ninth Street Northwest, who police named as driver of the other car, was not injured in the collision.

Another traffic victim yesterday was Pearl Trevell, 29, who was admitted to Casualty Hospital after the cab in which she was riding as a passenger was in collision with another car operated, police said, by Carl Hinton, colored, of 1400 Sixth Street Northwest.

War Zone Widened

Isles West of Dutch Harbor Cleared of Civilians by U. S.

By John Elliott
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

The disclosure that all of the Aleutian Islands, west of Dutch Harbor, principal American naval base in this chain of islands, as well as the Pribilof Islands, have been classified as parts of a total evacuation zone, was made yesterday by William Zimmerman, jr., assistant commissioner of the Office of Indian Affairs. He said that nearly 1000 civilians had been removed from these areas by the Navy and transferred to the American mainland. This action is tantamount to proclaiming these islands to be within the zone of military operations.

This revelation was made at a time when the United States Army and Navy are conducting operations designed to drive the Japanese from the foothold they have acquired in the outer fringes of the Aleutian Islands. No communiques were issued by either of the fighting services yesterday to amplify the statements they issued Saturday, announcing that Army bombers had inflicted damage on Japanese transports and escort ships off the Island of Agattu and had carried out four attacks on shore installations on the Japanese occupied island of Kiska.

Mr. Zimmerman said yesterday that practically all of the natives and a small number of white persons, consisting mostly of school teachers, weather observers, and traders, had been evacuated from the rocky, fog bound islands stretching west of Dutch Harbor. One of the last groups to be evacuated under the cooperative program worked out in conjunction by the Navy Department and the Office of Indian Affairs, arrived on the American mainland last week.

About 400 of these evacuees were removed from the Pribilof Islands of St. Paul and St. George which lie north of the Aleutian Islands in the Frigid waters of the Bering Sea. They are within about 400 miles of Dutch Harbor and the

Nine of Convoy Sunk in Arctic, Berlin Claims

10 Others Damaged In Sub, Air Attack, Says High Command

(Dispatches from enemy countries are published with the warning that they frequently contain misleading information intended for propaganda purposes.)

By the Associated Press

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), July 5.—German planes and submarines have sunk 9 ships and damaged 10 others in a Russian-bound convoy which was attacked yesterday in Arctic waters, German sources reported tonight.

The high command first announced that 6 ships were sunk and 10 damaged in the air and sea assault on the convoy between Norway's North Cape and Spitzbergen.

The Berlin radio later broadcast a report that one submarine which sank one of the ships was seen later sinking three other vessels in the convoy north of Bear Island, just below the Arctic region.

The high command communique said the six ships it reported sunk totaled 38,000 tons, including a 7000-ton tank-laden American transport. It listed four ships of 24,000 tons destroyed by planes and the other two mentioned in the communique as sunk by submarine.

(There was no confirmation of these German claims from any other source, but they recall a Berlin account of a five-day air and U-boat attack on a British-American convoy in the Arctic late in May. Then the Germans claimed sinking 18 ships, but all but 6 ships of this great convoy reached Russia safely, an exaggeration, as the British put it, of more than 175 per cent.)

Navy Officer Hero as Big U.S. Ship Is Sunk

Crowded by Survivors Of 2 Other Sinkings; 18 of 110 Aboard Die

By the Associated Press

An East Coast Port, July 5.—A big American merchantman crammed beyond lifeboat capacity with the survivors of two torpedoed vessels, was sunk near the northern coast of South America June 15, but not before a courageous Navy officer gave up his life to fire at the attacking submarine.

Seven hours earlier, Capt. Eric Johansen had halted the ship to pick up 63 crewmen adrift in lifeboats, and 110 men in all were standing by when the first torpedo struck at 9:21 p. m.

["We knew we were next," related Seaman Claude Gluckswain of Long Island City, N. Y., the United Press reported, "when we saw a third ship explode on the horizon. The flames were leaping into the air and we could only await our turn."

["A German officer on the conning tower pointed out life boats to some of our swimming men, after the torpedoing," said Second Officer Harlan Soeten of Philadelphia. "He wished us luck and the raider disappeared in the darkness."

Eighteen were lost—including nine of those who had survived the previous sinkings, six of the ship's regular crew, and three Navy gunners.

Thirty crewmen, eight gunners and the rest of the survivors were picked up after 18 hours adrift in overcrowded lifeboats and liferafts.

When the torpedo struck, an order to abandon ship came immediately

More Arrests Expected

Saboteurs' Trial to Start In Washington Wednesday

Trial of eight Nazi saboteurs captured after they had been landed from submarines on Long Island and in Florida, and who are now under heavy guard in the District Jail, yesterday was set definitely for Wednesday morning.

They will face a military commission composed of seven Army generals headed by Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy. The latter was not prepared to state yesterday the exact location of the hearings, or whether they would be public or private.

The accused were held under heavy guard at the jail, in custody of the Provost Marshal, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox. But neither Gen. Cox, the FBI, nor the Army vouchsafed any further information. Captured a little more than two weeks ago the saboteurs were brought here Friday night and placed in separate cells in a special wing of the building.

There was speculation as to whether pleas of guilty would be entered by the accused on Wednesday, although the sentence for conviction on the charges of sedition, espionage and conspiracy carries a mandatory sentence of death. The FBI and the Attorney General already have announced that the men confessed plans to paralyze war production and to attack civilian morale.

One of the agents, George John Dasch, former New York waiter, was reported to stand a chance of clemency because of cooperation with United States officials in procuring evidence against the others.

Included in the evidence to be entered against the men are caches of bombs and other explosives, as well as other material for sabotage that, it is charged, was buried by them on their arrival. Large sums

Navy Planes Join R.A.F. as Furious Ground Assaults Push Nazis Back

By George Lait
International News Service Staff Writer

Cairo, July 5.—Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's first major assault toward the Nile Delta was reported tonight to have been repulsed by Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck's British forces making a stand at El Alamein.

Smashing British land-air attacks apparently have removed, for the moment at least, the grave enemy threat to Alexandria, less than 70 miles away, and to the Suez Canal and the entire Middle East.

Rommel's Men Get No Rest

When a furious British counter-attack forced German mechanized units to abandon the El Ruweisat ridge 5 miles south of El Alamein, in the opinion of Cairo observers, it knocked Rommel from the spot he had chosen to launch his new eastward drive.

Not giving the tiring enemy a chance to rest, Britain's heavily reinforced Eighth Army slashed repeatedly at Rommel's forces southwest and west of El Alamein throughout Sunday, while the British air arm poured a hail of bombs on Italo-German columns, supply routes and encampments.

The Royal Navy Air Force and the R. A. F., operating jointly, left hundreds of German lorries and other equipment blazing and wrecked with a violent raid on 3500 vehicles south of El Alamein, northern anchor of the 35-mile battle line that runs from the Mediterranean to the Qattara Depression.

Many of the Enemy Surrenders

The harried enemy, his drive stopped short from his first big Egyptian objective—Britain's naval base at Alexandria—was trying to cope with the counter-attacking Eighth Army in a 15-mile square westward and southwest of El Alamein.

The British commander's success, in the narrow bottleneck in which the vital battle of Egypt is being fought, reduced the Axis bulge in the line south of El Alamein.

More than 1000 members of the enemy vanguard were reported to have surrendered, giving up the

Unity of Attack Stopped Rommel, Says U. S. Officer

By the United Press

Alexandria, Egypt, July 4. (Delayed).—Maj. Gen. Charles L. Scott, senior United States military observer in the Middle East, said today on his return from the front that Marshal Erwin Rommel's drive into Egypt has been stopped by "beautiful cooperation" among British imperial infantry, artillery, armored and air units.

Scott, who formerly commanded the Second Armored Division of the United States Army, said that before Rommel can resume his advance from El Alamein, 62 miles west of here, he must "refit and bring up his supplies and maintenance."

"In other words, he'll have to reorganize for a new offensive," Scott said.

"How long it will take him, I don't know. Now is the crucial time to hit him, particularly with air reinforcements. This, in my opinion, should be the time for a counter-offensive which might prove decisive provided very strong air reinforcements, especially bombers, were supplied.

"As an old cavalryman, I believe this is the golden opportunity for us," Scott said.

273 Died

20 Atlantic Ships Sunk Last Week

By the Associated Press

At least 273 seamen and passengers were killed in enemy submarine attacks on Allied and neutral merchant vessels in the western Atlantic area last week, but more than 400 others were rescued and 38 were reported missing.

The unofficial Associated Press tabulation of United and neutral nations' ship losses in the Atlantic and adjacent waters since America's entry into the war went up yesterday to 339 with the reported torpedoing of a big American merchantman off South America, and the sinking of a smaller American vessel off the northern coast of the Dominican Republic.

Last week's announced sinkings included 20 cargo ships, of which 11 were United States vessels, two British, three Panamanian, one Norwegian, one Yugoslavian, one Brazilian and one Latvian.

The tabulation:

	Week June 28-July 4	Since Pearl Harbor
Off the U. S.	7	143
Off Canada	0	35
In Caribbean	8	109
In Gulf of Mex.	3	28
Off S. America	2	22
Totals	20	337

Highlights in last week's reports of the Atlantic warfare were: The Washington announcement that British and Canadian warships have joined United States vessels in an intensified campaign against Axis submarines operating in American waters; the mysterious sinking of a medium-sized American merchantman in the Gulf of Mexico, with the loss of the entire crew of 33; the submarine-sinking of neutral Brazil's ninth merchant vessel, the 3666-ton Pedrinhas, in the Caribbean; the arrest of 20 suspected spies and enemy agents in British Honduras and the Panama Canal Zone for allegedly contacting enemy U-boats and constructing hideaway bases for these contacts, and an announcement from Lisbon stating that Portuguese vessels no longer would be permitted to sail to American ports in view of the extended Axis submarine blockade of American waters.

Stern at First, Later All Smiles, Says Man Off Drottningholm

By International News Service

New York, July 5.—Passengers landed from the diplomatic exchange ship Drottningholm expressed belief tonight that Government agents who have been searching the vessel since last Tuesday "have found what they were looking for."

Among the 50 passengers permitted to leave the ship today were C. Charles Devaux, former hotel operator at Nice, France, and Mrs. Devaux. About 540 passengers still remain aboard.

Devaux said he and his wife were examined by five different agencies, with each examination lasting about an hour. Saturday, sixth day of the investigation, Government agents boarded the Drottningholm with "stern faces," Devaux said.

"After several hours of search," Devaux added, "they looked happy instead of grim. Apparently they had found what they were looking for."

Strict Investigation Called 'A Scandal'

By the Associated Press

Jersey City, N. J., July 5.—Lawton S. Parker, noted portrait painter and an associate of the National Academy, who stepped ashore from the diplomatic exchange liner Drottningohlm today, denounced as "a great scandal" the official investigation of passengers returning to this country from Europe.

More than 400 passengers are still aboard the ship which docked here last Tuesday. All are being questioned by Army and Navy intelligence officers, FBI agents and Immigration and Customs authorities.

Parker declared that he had "gone through a great deal in Europe, but there was nothing done there that compared to the handling of the people on the Drottningholm."

He said that he planned to make his home in Santa Monica, Calif. He had lived in France for the last 21 years.

A group of 98 Latin Americans were released from the Pennsylvania Hotel where they had been detained since the ship arrived for questioning by Federal officials.

Sixteen passengers were removed to Ellis Island, bringing to 147 the number of persons who have been sent to the island from the Drottningholm.

"That lieutenant was a real man," Soeten said. "After we had left the ship he managed to fire about three shots at the sub with the help of the first officer, who didn't know anything about the gun.

"The lieutenant had told his own men to leave, and he stood there by the rail and wished them good luck as they jumped overboard.

"He didn't like the sea, either. He used to tell me about it when we were on watch together."

U. S. Freighter Sunk Off Dominican Republic

Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic, July 5 (AP).—The 2698-ton United States freighter Norlandia was sunk by an enemy submarine Friday night 26 miles off the northern coast of the Caribbean republic and 14 survivors, including the captain, arrived last night.

The captain said eight others of the crew of 30 were adrift in a second lifeboat. Their fate was not known.

Anti-Axis Riots Break Out in Costa Rica

San Jose, Costa Rica, July 5 (AP)—Eighty-three business and other establishments of Italians, Germans and Spanish nationalists in this Central American capital were damaged last night in a demonstration of protest against the submarine torpedoing of the United States freighter San Pablo. More than 50 persons were injured before order was restored.

Twenty-three Costa Rican stevedores died in the holds of the ship as it went down at its dock from three hits last Thursday night at Puerto Lemon.

Lopez, Colombia's President-Elect, Due Here Today

New York, July 5.—Dr. Alfonso Lopez, President-elect of Colombia, arrived here today en route to Washington, where he said he will discuss with President Roosevelt military, political and economic matters concerning the United States and Colombia.

He will leave tomorrow for the White House, where he will be the guest of President Roosevelt until Sunday. He will then return to New York for a week's visit before going back to Colombia, where he will be inaugurated President on August 7. Dr. Lopez recalled that this is his second visit with President Roosevelt as President-elect of Colombia, having been a guest at the White House eight years ago before taking office for his first four-year term.

ranged far over central China since 1938.

Together, Hankow and Nanchang are the main operational centers of the westward-facing Japanese front in central China. In addition to their airfields, they have troop concentrations and large supply dumps.

Reliable authorities said that in trying to raid Hengyang and Kweilin yesterday the Japanese were doing their utmost to knock out the airfields outside these cities as bases for the new United States Army Air Force. The American fighter plaies, though outnumbered, smashed both attacks.

At Hengyang, on the Canton-Hankow Railway, the defenders barely had time to refuel after the first attack yesterday when another large formation of enemy bombers and fighters roared over.

The Central News Agency said an Allied air force, possibly of both American and Chinese planes, intercepted enemy bombers from Canton headed for Kweilin.

The raiders were sighted over Hohsien, and Allied fighters pounced on them from above and sent them scurrying.

Fight for Railway Seesawing

American and Chinese quarters here were jubilant over the results of the weekend operations. They believed it was the first time that the Japanese in China had had to cope simultaneously with aerial resistance in two areas and aerial attacks in two others.

Meanwhile, an Army communique revealed that fighting below the Hangchow-Nanchang Railway in East China's Kiangsi and Chekiang Provinces was seesawing back and forth. The Chinese retook the highway town of Yihwang Thursday after it had been in Japanese hands 24 hours.

Guerillas constantly were raiding near Shangjao, on the railway in eastern Kiangsi, and at Yiwu, below the railway in Chekiang.

The communique said that in northern Honan, at the foot of the Taihang Mountains, where more than 10,000 casualties were inflicted on the Japanese last month, fighting had subsided since the Chinese had cut enemy columns into a number of isolated units.

6700 Chinese Killed In Kiangsi, Tokyo Claims

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), July 5 (AP).—More than 6700 Chinese soldiers were killed and another 800 were captured in a 5-day battle against the Fourth Chungking Army in a sector of the Ihwang River in eastern Kiangsi Province, a D. N. B. dispatch from Tokyo reported tonight.

The German News agency also said the Japanese captured 730 rifles, 32 light machine guns, 18 heavy machine guns, 2 mine throwers and a large quantity of ammunition.

Imperials Turn Captured Guns on Foe

Cairo, July 5 (U.P.).—New Zealand infantry captured 22 German tanks and 40 cannon and promptly put them into action against Marshal Erwin Rommel's stalled and weary Africa Corps in the battle for Egypt today.

The captured guns included some 105-millimeter howitzers and some of Rommel's famed 88-millimeter antitank cannon. Several hundred German gunners were captured along with the field pieces, every one of which counts at this stage of the battle.

The New Zealander's attack was a perfect example of the new coordination of arms displayed by Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck's forces the last few days. First, British tanks deployed westward along the ridge below El Alamein. By the time German guns had opened up on the tanks, British artillery was within range of the German positions and it hurled out a barrage.

While British and German guns dueled, the British tanks maneuvered around to the side of the German positions. In that moment of indecision, when the Germans were dividing their attention between the British artillery in front of them and the tanks at the side, the New Zealanders struck from the other side. Speeding up close in trucks, they charged in with bayonets before the German guns could be turned around. The Germans threw up their hands and surrendered en masse. The New Zealanders siezed the guns and turned them on 22 German tanks which had moved up to engage the British tanks. The German tank crews promptly surrendered and the whole German salient was wiped out.

Resistance Stiff, Rome Says

Rome (from Italian broadcasts), July 5 (AP).—British resistance in the El Alamein sector has stiffened and the high command says that violent fighting raged all day yesterday on the front southeast of that desert position.

Il Giornale d'Italia said the British concentrated various troops units from the Nile Delta and "various divisions from the Near and Middle East at the front durng the last few days." Among these was a fresh Indian Division moved from Iraq.

United States and British submarines were reported concentrated in the Mediterranean to disrupt Axis supply routes.

(For the second successive day, the Italian communique spoke of repulsing "repeated enemy counterattacks" and failed to mention specific gains.

everyone can join a committee of the whole and go out and get in more rubber will help materially to bring the grand finale of the drive to a more successful conclusion."

Horace Walker, executive secretary of the District Salvage Committee, said Boyd's suggestion was more or less impractical in the District when he estimated that at least 85 per cent of all activity is bound up with defense. He regarded it as highly unlikely that the committee would make any move for such a holiday here.

Just Mending Tanks, Missing Yank Explains

By the Associated Press

Cairo, July 5.—His shaggy gray hair powdered with the dust of the desert, Master Sergeant George L. Seastrom, U. S. A., strolled into the American Ordnance office here, saluted and addressed himself to officers who had been worrying over his whereabouts for weeks and unofficially had given him up for lost.

"Hell," said the sarge, "that's nothing to be concerned about."

The lanky, raw-boned professional soldier, 20 years in the Army, is one of the best of the United States tank experts that have been helping the British with their American-made models. The officers listened eagerly to his story.

On Own in Desert

Not all of it was made public—for example how it happened that Seastrom's "dog tag" (identification disc) had been found in the desert by the British and turned over to American authorities on June 15. Seastrom then had been in the desert on his own for one month, nursing the tank engines he has come to love like babies.

After the tag had been turned in, usually an ominous sign, messages to the roving technician had gone unanswered and Seastrom was unofficially considered lost. Meanwhile Seastrom was deep in the western desert, helping the British with their tanks and winning praise for valorous acts over and above the line of his technical duty.

During one battle, a British crew was unable to start their General Grant tank so Seastrom worked his way forward, put things right and returned. Later he was in charge of a group of British noncoms inspecting tanks at a reception point west of Fort Capuzzo on the Libyan-Egyptian border.

Spurned Escape Chance

He stayed at that post for a month while the Germans and Italians bombed and strafed Fort Capuzzo nightly. He could have returned to Cairo any time, but he preferred to stay on.

Seastrom, about 40, doesn't know exactly where he was born, but he thinks it was some now extinct lumber camp near the Wisconsin-Minnesota border. He has a wife and two children, believed now to be living at Tacoma, Wash.

He came to the Middle East a year ago in the first group of Americans to teach the British how to operate and service the Honey and General Grant tanks. He has seen service in India and throughout the Middle East. His work probably has saved thousands of dollars' worth of equipment and many lives.

struggle in the face of intensifying British-American air attacks and lightning-like counter thrusts by Auchinleck's reinforced units.

[Never before have the German desert soldiers been known to surrender in such a number and in such a circumstance, the Associated Press reported. Most were of the superb Ninetieth Light Infantry which recently was reinforced from Germany. Some had fought in Russia.]

[With the prisoners was a German war correspondent who mistook a British tank for a German one and rapped on the door to ask the time, a United Press dispatch said. He was seized.]

British Reinforced

Auchinleck's forces, in addition to being strengthened by fresh troops from other sections of the Middle East, also have been getting strong tank reinforcements—while Rommel's armor was known to be seriously weakened by the hammering of Britain's land and fleet arms. American-made General Grants and General Lees, already proven in desert combat, have been rushed to the bottleneck to be used in Auchinleck's continuing counterattacks.

(Reuters (British) News Agency quoted the Budapest radio, relaying Berlin dispatches, as saying that American troops had met German and Italian forces for the first time of the war on the El Alamein front. There was no confirmation of this report.)

Alexandria and Suez Raided

Axis planes, from their bases within easy striking distance, raided Britain's naval base at Alexandria and three more over the Canal area.

(D. N. B., the German news agency, claimed that the Nazi air force had mined the Canal and bombed objectives nearby.)

[The R. A. F. communique said 14 Axis planes were shot down Saturday, the Associated Press reported. This brought the total Axis plane losses to 42 for Friday and Saturday. The communique told of an attack on an enemy convoy off Sapienza Island, which was hauling supplies and reinforcements to the Axis. Sapienza is a Greek island west of Cape Matapan.

["One ship was hit by a torpedo and left enveloped in fire and smoke," said the communique.]

Three Axis Planes Downed at Malta

Valetta, Malta, July 5 (AP).—One German bomber and two fighters were shot down and several others were damaged over Malta during the last 24 hours, it was officially reported tonight.

The British said bombs fell over a wide area during three raids last night.

(In London the Air Ministry said 53 German and Italian planes were destroyed over Malta during June, 48 by R. A. F. fighters and 8 by antiaircraft fire.)

Ex-Speed King, 44, Downs Nazi at Suez

Cairo, July 5 (AP).—One of the pilots who brought down German bombers over the Suez Canal area last night was Wing Commander George H. Stainforth, winner of the famous Schneider Trophy in 1932.

At 44 he is the oldest active fighter pilot in the R. A. F. The Vickers supermarine plane with a Rolls Royce motor, with which Stainforth won the trophy, later was developed into the speedy Hurricane fighter-bomber.

infantry," the high command said. "In the Belgorod and Volchansk directions stubborn fighting with the enemy continues."

Then followed the breakdown of limited successes in some quarters, setbacks in others. In one Kursk sector, the communique said, German infantry had been assaulting an inhabited place occupied by the Red army.

(The German high command claimed that German allied forces had broken through Russian positions between Kharkov and Kursk and that the Axis vanguard had reached the Don River on a wide front.)

(A Berlin dispatch to the Stockholm newspaper Allehanda said the Germans claimed to have crossed the Don at unidentified points and established bridgeheads on the east bank.)

The best available military opinion in Moscow was that Marshal Timoshenko was engaged in delaying tactics at the expense of territorial losses. He was believed to be husbanding his main strength—there was no indication that he had yet used his reserves—for more decisive battles, probably in expectation of coordinating them with an Allied offensive against Germany from the west.

Earlier Soviet front reports said the Germans were steadily sharpening and widening a spearhead east of Kursk, had captured a large inhabited point at a cost of 100 tanks in the Belgorod area, and had wedged into Red army defenses beyond Volchansk, against which they hurled a battering ram of 200 tanks.

Powerful Russian counterattacks in some sectors, however, were said to have slowed down the drive by four armored, five infantry and two motorized divisions striking east of Kursk, where the Red army had fallen back to new lines.

Lash Back to Southward

Farther south in the Volchansk direction, the reports said, the Russians fell back slightly, dug in, attacked the German flanks from two directions and in a battle of many hours recaptured an uninhabited point.

[The German objectives, the Associated Press reported, appeared to be to take Staroi Oskol, on the Oskol River 80 miles southeast of Kursk, Novo Oskol, 60 miles northeast of Belgorod, cross the Oskol River paralleling the border of Kursk and Voronezh Provinces, and march on the city of Voronezh, a vital communications center linking central and southern Russia.

[Voronezh, capital of the Province of Voronezh, is 130 miles east of Kursk and is about half-way between Moscow and Rostov on the main railroad linking the two cities. Voronezh is on the Voronezh River about 5 miles north of its confluence with the Don. The city had a population of 212,400 in 1933.]

Meanwhile, another theater of big-scale movement developed on the Kalinin Front, where several new armored and motorized divisions supported by strong air fleets weer attacking in two strategic sectors.

Nazis Attacking Repeatedly

At some points numerically superior German forces drove small wedges into the Russian positions, one of them at a price of 2000 dead, 27 tanks and 5 planes, dispatches frm the northwest revealed.

Despite rain and soggy footing, the Germans were reported still moving up heavy guns and other units and attacking repeatedly. Forty transport planes landed at one German airfield immediately behind the front line with reinforcements. The Red air force battered steadily at German concentrations and columns moving up to the front, and engaged enemy planes in fierce battles.

Southern dispatches said the German troops massed east of Kursk apparently were striving to effect a junction with the forces driving from Belgorod, 100 miles to the south.

The wake of the German advance was reported strewn with many thousands of enemy dead and the wreckage of hundreds of tanks. The Russians were defending every foot of land, every hill, every village.

Often at the end of a day's battle the Germans were said to be retiring to their initial position to reorganize for the next day's attack. The steppe-like terrain favored the mechanized thrusts, but at every natural or artificial barrier Red infantry was striking with antitank rifles and combustible bottles.

(A London broadcast estimated German tank losses in the last few days at 700 to 800.)

Grange Calls Henderson's Price-Control Plan 'Unworkable and Unsound'

John Thomas Assails OPA Fund Request

Leon Henderson's "system of price control" was denounced by the head of the National Grange last night as "unsound and unworkable," a denunciation which came in the midst of heated Congressional controversy over the amount of funds to be voted for Henderson's Office of Price Administration.

The Grange's attack came in letters to the chairmen of the House and Senate Agriculture and Appropriations Committees from Albert S. Goss, national master, and was prompted by Henderson's recent announcement of "the first break" in established price ceilings, those for canned and dried fruits.

Goss took exception to Henderson's statement that the action was necessitated by Congressional requirement for 110 per cent of parity prices on farm products and failure to protect packers and processors from price squeezes.

"Opposite of Truth"

"This is the very opposite of the truth," Goss said. "Mr. Henderson established his ceilings in utter disregard of the parity clause, and the reason he has had to change his prices is not because of any failure of Congress but because his policy resulted in prices so low for farmers that they could not cover the cost of harvesting."

Meanwhile, Senator John Thomas (Republican) of Idaho attacked the budget request of 161 million dollars for operation of Henderson's office, calling it "asinine" in an interview with International News Service.

While Henderson originally asked 200 millions, which would cover employment of 90,000 persons, the Budget Bureau cut the amount to 161 millions and the House slashed it to 75 millions. The issue is now before a Senate Appropriations subcommittee.

OPA Compared to NRA

Senator Thomas said that "no more asinine request has ever come to Congress from an executive agency than that of the Office of Price Administration for an appropriation of 161 million dollars to provide for 66,000 employes."

"The NRA," Thomas said, "at the height of its power, when every industry in the country was under regulation, never had more than 5000 employes.

"The small retailers of the country are being choked to death in a maze of price regulations. We are told that about 15 other commodities of common use are to be subject to rationing. I shudder to think of the new complications in store for business."

Subsidies Condemned

Goss hit at Henderson's advocacy of subsidies for industries caught in squeezes brought about by price ceilings, and said "the effort to bring public pressure on Congress to adopt a huge subsidy program justifies us in requesting an investigation of the facts."

He declared that the effect of establishing ceilings at March prices will be to reduce the prices to farmers to less than they received for 1941 crops though the farmers' costs, especially labor and transportation, "have increased enormously" since the 1941 harvest.

He declared that the "unworkable" program is resulting in "very serious failure to produce," adding:

"In our judgment, neither Congress nor the farmers are in any way to blame. The fault lies in the Office of Price Administration."

Congress May Keep Control

Meanwhile, it was suggested by the Associated Press that Congress may keep a finger on price control and rationing by limiting immediate appropriations and requiring the OPA to ask for more money before it can broaden its present program.

Members of a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee were reported to have instructed Henderson to trim his current requests for funds to the minimum necessary to carry on without expanding his operations.

One committee member who asked not to be quoted by name, the Associated Press reported, said the tacit understanding was that when and if Henderson believed it had become necessary to extend rationing or other controls, he could come back for additional funds to finance the expansion.

The net effort, it was pointed out, would be to provide Congress with a check on any enlargement of the present rationing program, covering sugar, gasoline in 17 Eastern States, automobiles, tires, typewriters and bicycles.

Henderson has told the committee that rationing of about 15 major groups of items might become necessary within the next year.

Red Tape Cut In Inter-Allied War Supply

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

New regulations designed to provide a more equitable distribution of war costs among the United Nations will permit United States Army forces to acquire services, facilities, supplies and equipment in foreign zones without cash payments to foreign governments, the War Department announced yesterday.

Under this procedure the services, supplies, facilities and equipment will be inventoried, assessed as to value and receipted by the receiving American unit. A record of these services made available will be submitted to the adjutant general six times yearly. The supplying foreign government then will receive appropriate credit against its account on the lend-lease books in this country.

Under the old system, United States military commanders abroad simply gave receipts to foreign commanders for whatever goods or facilities they took over. The new program, the War Department said, will more equitably distribute the cost of the war by utilizing a big-scale barter system. At the same time, United States forces will obtain as many supplies as possible "on the scene" thereby saving transportation space and time.

The new procedure also will avoid bookkeeping details and delays which would crop up if formal cash contracts had to be arranged with foreign firms every time an item was needed.

R.A.F.'s Gesture Fails to Save Flier's Child

London, July 5 (AP).—Three-year-old June Challis, whose illness of diphtheria brought her airman father flying across the ocean from a Canadian training airfield early in June, died today after suffering a relapse.

Challis, undergoing training with an R. A. F. unit at a Canadian ground school, received a compassionate official shift back to Britain after being informed by cable of June's illness.

Authorities arranged for his transfer across the Atlantic in a Liberator bomber. He was rushed to the ferry command airport and put aboard the plane with a 150-pound kit, despite the regulation limiting baggage to 40 pounds. He carried his own equipment and dozens of oranges for June.

June, overjoyed at seeing her father, showed rapid improvement for a time, then suffered a relapse and died a few minutes before her father, responding to an emergency call, reached her bedside again.

R.A.F. Score Is High

London, July 5 (AP).—The R. A. F. sank or damaged 32 Axis ships and destroyed 265 planes during June and raided Germany 20 times by night and 13 times by day in that month, the air ministry announced today, setting R. A. F. losses at 422 planes in the European and Middle Eastern theaters for that period.

Three of the night raids were 1000-bomber attacks on Cologne, the Ruhr district, where Essen was the hardest hit target, and on Bremen. A "number of 300-fighter sweeps" were included in the daylight operations, according to the review.

The German air force was over Britain 22 nights in June, directing sharp attacks against Norwich, Southampton and Weston Super-Mare.

Raid Morgues Set Up

New York, July 5 (AP).—The establishment of emergency reception centers to receive the bodies of victims of an air raid was announced today by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia.

Declaring that he hesitated to speak of it, the mayor advised New Yorkers in his weekly broadcast to file their names with the emergency welfare bureau to expedite the reunion of families separated by enemy action, and to be fingerprinted by the bureau of emergency identification to assure identification.

"You see," he said, "part of our task is to locate and identify those who may be killed in air raids, as well as the injured. The plan is now complete. Emergency reception places for the bodies of persons killed have been selected already."

Power Infringed, Vandenberg Says

Legislation authorizing a pipeline and barge canal across Florida was opposed by Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan yesterday on the grounds it constituted "unjustifiable congressional interference" with Presidential powers.

The House-approved bill is expected to be reported with amendments by the Senate Commerce Committee tomorrow.

Vandenberg, saying the President's war powers granted sufficient authority to "build all the pipelines the situation requires," noted that Petroleum Coordinator Ickes already has arranged to move a second-hand pipe line from Texas to Florida and proposes to have it in operation in 120 days.

Soviet Reporter Killed Covering Sevastopol Siege

Moscow, July 5 (AP).—Eugene Petrov, 40, one of the best known newspapermen and popular novelists of the Soviet Union, died while covering the siege of Sevastopol, it was announced today.

As correspondent for the Soviet Information Bureau, the army newspaper Red Star, and Pravda since the beginning of the German-Russian War, Petrov's frontline dispatches were read widely in Russia and the United States.

He was the second Soviet Information Bureau official to die in service. Alexander Afinogenov, celebrated playwright, was killed in December during an air raid on Moscow.

Petrov was the co-author of several best selling novels, including "Twelve Chairs," and "The Golden Calf."

Party Bombed Out of Orient Tells of Flight

By Betty McDevitt

Escape from Singapore Harbor through a smokescreen provided by other ships fired by Japanese bombs; ten days at sea aboard a cattle boat designed to accommodate only 16 passengers but carrying 105 . . . These are highlights of the flight from the Orient by a group of missionaries, five of whom are safe in Takoma Park, Md.

In the party were Paul Williams, treasurer of the Far Eastern Division of the general conference of Seventh-day Adventists, and his wife; William A. Bradley, secretary of the Far Eastern Division, Mrs. Bradley and their 9-year-old son, James, and Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Moon. The latter couple is now in Kansas City.

22 Years In Orient

The story of the escape is told by Williams, who served his faith for 22 years in the Orient. After six weeks of daily bombing in Singapore the missionaries sailed on an American freighter January 30 for Java, he said. Just before the ship was ready to sail with two others the docks and everything in the surrounding territory were bombed. Ships ahead and behind were hit. Their ship eventually sailed through a screen of smoke from the burning ships.

A few hours after the ship got underway it was stopped by a British patrol which warned the captain he was heading directly for mine fields. The patrol then led the ship to safer waters.

From Batavia, where the Williames stayed 20 days to help fellow missionaries who were brought there after their ship was burned at another port in Sumatra, they sailed in a convoy February 23 on a Dutch transport which slipped away in the darkness. One boat in the convoy disappeared a few miles out.

Board Cattle Boat

At Bunbury, a little port in Western Australia, the missionaries boarded a cattle boat, loaded to the gunwales with 105 passengers and many cattle. The captain at first refused to put out because the ship was badly in need of repair and not built for ocean duty. He finally consented and the ship headed for Freemantle, Australia, 2000 miles away. Ten days packed with fear and hardship followed as the vessel wove in and out of war zones.

Men, women and children were herded together in the hold which had not been completely cleaned. Each day there were fewer head of cattle, Williams said. Passengers were being fed with the fresh beef because there had not been enough food for all aboard. The animals ate in the same quarters with the passengers. "But everyone kept well," Williams reported. From Freemantle they travelled by train to Melbourne where on March 16 the sailed for aSn Francisco on an American boat.

Officials in San Francisco, Williams said, "could hardly believe their eyes" when they saw the boat come into the harbor. The Japanese radio had reported it bombed four days previously.

Lard Delights Reds

Moscow, July 5 (AP).—"Please tell your Americans how grateful an old Russian lady is for their nice lard," said 86-year-old Vera Polikarpovna Shirokova to American newspapermen after the product had been placed on sale in Moscow's stores.

The lard, as well as planes, tanks, trucks, jeeps, field telephones, and other equipment was part of the aid the United States engaged to send to Russia.

barren Alaska mainland south of the Yukon River. The fact that civilians have been removed from the Pribilof group indicates that the Navy thinks that the Japanese may be contemplating a move to seize these islands as a jumping off place from which to attack American naval bases in both the Aluetian Islands and in Alaska.

The dominant belief in Washington, however, is to discount the Japanese occupation of the three outer Aleutian Islands of Kiska, Atu, and Agattu as a serious menace to Dutch Harbor. It is felt that while the Japanese occupied islands may be useful for submarine bases, they offer no good landing fields from which airplanes could take off to bomb American naval bases. The islands may also serve as a good observation post for the Japanese from which to watch the movements of American naval units.

But the Japanese occupation of the fringes of the Aleutian Islands is mainly designed as a threat to Russia's Kamchatka Peninsula, which lies some 450 miles to the west, it is considered here. The Japanese move in occupying these islands is thought to be preparatory to an attack against Vladivostok and Siberia.

Ties Seen Binding Allies After War

Break 'Well Nigh Impossible,' Foreign Policy Association Says

The ways and modes of living of the United Nations are being so drastically revamped and made so mutually dependent that the "wartime ties of the United Nations could not be severed without a general collapse," according to a report on the machinery of collaboration published by the Foreign Policy Association yesterday.

The report, prepared for the association by Payson S. Wild, jr., analyzes the machinery already existing between the United Nations and the steps that remain to be taken to achieve a fully integrated international organization.

"Collaboration among many members of the United Nations is now so intimate and affects so many aspects of their political and economic life that a sudden snap-back to prewar conditions of relative autonomy would be well nigh impossible."

While it is too early to assess accurately the long-run value of the existing machinery, the report stated, "certain tendencies are discernible which, if they continue, may have revolutionary consequences.

"It should be noted that a large number of American administrative officials and experts are being trained in international affaffirs and are learning, through actual experience to cope with vast problems on a world scale. They are not dealing with blueprints or day dreams.

"If and when the time comes for the carrying out of international rehabilitation schemes, there will be available a sizable reservoir of experienced public servants not only in Washington but in all the other United Nations. This augurs well for the success of international administration and organization when hostilities cease, provided the determination to work together continues.

"During the transition period between the close of military operations and the negotiation of a peace settlement, the wartime agencies of collaboration could continue to function. A permanent organization to regulate international economic relations, including shipping, cartels, exchange and production, labor and health conditions, might be welded together out of the wartime economic boards, the Economic Section of the League of Nations now at Princeton, N. J., and the International Labor Organization at present in Montreal. The experienced staffs of these war and prewar bodies are available as a nucleus for an international economic administrative agency.

"It is possible that labor questions would be handled better by an office functioning separately; colonial administration might be taken care of by an institute or commission deriving its authority from an agreement something like the Pan-American territorial administration treaty; financial questions might be delegated to a revived Bank of International Settlements.

"The details, though important, do not matter so much now. What is significant is the existence of machinery to build upon. In addition, as far as the United States and this hemisphere are concerned, there is a wealth of agencies like the Lend-Lease Office, the Board of Economic Warfare, the Export-Import Bank, the food committees, the joint committees with Canada, and all the inter-American boards and commissions ready and equipped to cooperate in the work of international administration.

"It is on the political side that the United Nations have made the least progress toward international government. Yet the political side of international government will have to be developed if the present loose alliance between the United Nations is not to degenerate into a military confederation.

"The Pacific War Councils and other forms of consultation between political leaders of the United Nations, however, might be made to outlast the war and transition periods, and utilized as the basis for some sort of permanent world organization. Regional unions or federations may develop, but global problems, such as that of security, will have to be talked out and settled somewhere.

"In practice, a combination of both regional and world-wide patterns of international government seems to be in the making. Moreover, if, instead of presenting national groups with the opportunity to vote against a particular form of international government after the conflict, the wartime measures of international cooperation were simply continued and readapted for peacetime use, it might be much easier to win support for machinery that is already proving its usefulness than to gain indorsement for a plan that might seem new and strange."

Rev. McKenzie Accepts Call Of D. C. Church

The Rev. Stewart McKenzie, pastor of the Bethel Presbyterian Church at Jarrettsville, Harford County, Md., has accepted a call to the pulpit of Western Presbyterian Church, 1906 H Street Northwest, effective September 1.

He will succeed the Rev. Dr. J. Harvey Dunham, who resigned as pastor on March 31, 1941 because of illness, after a pastorate of 30 years. Dr. Dunham is now pastor emeritus.

A native of Philadelphia Mr. McKenzie was educated in public schools there, and also at Geneva College, Beaver Falls, Pa.; the Presbyterian Biblical Seminary, New York City, and Westminster Theological Seminary, Philadelphia. He came to Jarrettsville in May, 1935, from Philadelphia.

500 Religious Leaders Back Voorhis Bill

More than 500 religious leaders of all faiths, including several Washingtonians, have appealed to Congress to adopt the Voorhis bill for establishment of a commission on postwar reconstruction.

That appeal was made public yesterday by the Right Rev. Msgr. John A. Ryan of Washington, director of the department of social action, the National Catholic Welfare Conference; the Rev. James Myers of New York City, industrial secretary of the Federal Council of Churches, who is well known here, and Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman, chairman of the Commission on Justice and Peace of the Central Conference of American Rabbis.

(Representative Voorhis (Democrat) of California on March 12 introduced in the House a resolution to establish the National Commission for Postwar Reconstruction.)

The joint statement pointed out that at congressional hearings on the bill "representatives of the major national associations of employers, organized labor, farm organizations and consumers, as well as national representatives if the three faiths" had testified in favor of its general principles.

"Never before to our knowledge has there appeared to be such substantial agreement among diverse economic groups in support of a general legislative proposal of this kind," they stated

Among local signers of the statement urging adoption of the bill, in addition to Msgr. Ryan, were the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; the Rev. Wilfrid Parsons, professor of political science at Catholic University; Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, spiritual leader of the Washington Hebrew Congregation and chairman of the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital; the Rev. R. A. McGowan, assistant director, National Catholic Welfare Conference; the Rev. Lucian L. Leuerman, director of the National Catholic School of Social Service here, and the Rev. Edgar Schmiedeler, director of the Family Life Bureau, N. C. W. C.

Zoo Orangutan Dies in Her Cage

there until the Zoo closed at 5:30 p. m.

Thousands of friends passed by during the day, and many remarked: "Look, Suzy's asleep."

Dr. William M. Mann, director of the National Zoological Park, said a post mortem would be performed today and then the body would be turned over to the National Museum.

Speculation that the Zoo's only female orangutan died of lovesickness was scorned by Dr. Mann, who said she had gotten along very well without a mate for years. The Zoo's other two orangutans, Dopey and Wrestler, were brought here from the East Indies some time ago in hopes one would develop into a satisfactory husband, but they provided no heartthrobs for the airy Suzy.

After her first encounter with Dopey, she had ignored them. Dopey has been feeling poorly since then. Suzy reached about a yard of her arm through the cage to shake hands with him on his arrival. She held on, then grasped his other hand and finally both feet. She held all four until she got bored and released her hold, plunging Dopey to the ground on his neck.

Suzy got out of her cage a couple of times by loosing a bar, which she waved at keepers who tried to lure her back with oranges and bananas, but an obituary is no place for details about such unseemly behavior.

Suzy is survived by many relatives in Sumatra. There will be no funeral.

Despondent Husband Kills Wife, Child, Self

Grafton, W. Va., July 5 (AP).—Orville L. Kemsey, 32, a despondent glass worker worried over losing his eyesight, shot and killed his wife, Sally, 29, and their 11-year-old daughter today, then ended his own life with a rifle, coroner Paul P. Warden reported. Kimsey left two notes, one of which said:

"I am not able to support my family because of my poor health and Sally is not strong enough to take on such a responsibility."

take up the deadlock with House and Senate leaders at his regular legislative conference today. Meanwhile, the full Senate Appropriations Committee was expected to accept its subcommittee's proposal and send it on to the Senate, whose approval, before the day ends, was anticipated. That will leave the next step in the deadlock up to the House.

Unless agreement is reached today on a continuing resolution it appears doubtful that Agriculture Department workers can receive their full pay on Wednesday. Officials have said it might be possible to pay them only for the last week in June, funds for which were provided in last year's appropriation bill.

Representauve Everett Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, had a new substitute already drafted which he hoped would be approved. It would permit the department to pay all salaries due during July, which would amount to 56 million dollars, but allow no money for other purposes.

While the appropriation bill controversy raged, the Senate prepared to take up today a measure by Senator John H. Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, authorizing loans on wheat, corn, cotton, rice, tobacco and peanuts of 100 per cent of parity. Present law limits loans to 85 per cent of parity and farmers get the remaining 15 per cent in the form of parity and soil conservation payments, received the following year.

The 100 per cent loan would give them 100 per cent parity for their crops as soon as they were harvested.

The week also should bring final word from the House Ways and Means Committee on the size and rates of the new tax bill to be submitted to the House, product of months of hearings and intracommittee debate. The committee plans to hold its final meeting on the bill this week, to be marked, it is expected, by a fresh effort to include a retail sales tax and thereby add several billion dollars annually to the yield of the measure, now placed at $5,052,300,000.

Sponsors expected the Senate to take up also during the week the bill providing for construction of a barge line across Florida and for a system of pipelines to increase the movement of petroleum products to the Eastern Seaboard with less dependence upon submarine threatened tanker shipments.

The Agriculture Subcommittee headed by Senator Guy M. Gillette, (Democrat) of Iowa, hoped to question Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, today on use of surplus grain and produce alcohol for synthetic rubber production, while the Senate Patents Committee planned to go into the question of oil refining patents and licensing pools as they affect the production of high-octane gasoline for aircraft.

The Senate Finance Committee, meanwhile, planned to work on the Pepper bill to provide benefits for civilians disabled as a result of war hazards, which encountered considerable opposition during its initial consideration by the Senate.

Pastor Honored On Anniversary

DR. JOHN E. BRIGGS, was honored yesterday on the thirty-third anniversary of his pastorate at the Fifth Baptist Church

Richard Quirin, 34; Henry H. Henck, 35, and Herman Haupt, 22.

Four of the men were landed by a Nazi submarine on Long Island June 13, the others on a Florida beach June 17.

Church Honors Dr. Briggs

The Rev. Dr. John E. Briggs, who declined offers of other pulpits because he wanted to minister to Southwest Washington, yesterday was honored on his thirty-third anniversary as pastor of Fifth Baptist Church at 6½ and E Streets Southwest.

The man who led the praise for Dr. Briggs was his former schoolmate—now Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the D. C. Baptist Convention of Churches, who sketched the notable ministry of his friend and fellow clergyman.

During his local pastorate, said Dr. Weaver, the Fifth Baptist cleric has welcomed 4049 persons into church membership, including 2336 by baptism. Contributions, about one-third of which were given to Christian education and missions, were more than $700,000. He has helped organize several Sunday Schools and churches in the Washington area.

Dr. Briggs last night used for his sermon subject the text of his first sermon preached 49 years ago. It was "The Heavenly Race."

Chiropodists Push Bill to Commission Foot Specialists

Early action on a bill sponsored by Senator James H. Hughes (Democrat), of Delaware, to provide commissions for the specialists who tackle the growing Army's corns, bunions and other foot ailments was advocated yesterday by the National Association of Chiropodists.

The bill specifies that the surgeon general shall appoint qualified foot specialists as officers in such numbers as will provide at least one doctor for each base hospital and training camp. Those granted commissions would become Reserve officers in the U. S. Army medical department.

'Fuehrer' Kunze's Whereabouts Kept Close Secret

Hartford, Conn., July 5 (INS).—Federal agents clamped down with the greatest secrecy tonight on the whereabouts of Gerhardt Wilhelm Kunze, national leader of the German-American Bund.

Kunze, arrested in Mexico Friday and flown to the United States by plane yesterday, was believed headed for Hartford in FBI custody. He is scheduled to go on trial here next week on Federal charges of espionage.

Mass Resignations Thin Lewis' Ranks

Southern Mine Chief and Aides Denounce Leader, Go Over to C. I. O.

By the Associated Press

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 5.—Charging that John L. Lewis is attempting to "wreck the labor movement," Bernard Borah, regional director of District 50, United Mine Workers of America, today announced his resignation and a mass withdrawal of Southern locals of District 50.

Borah said the Southern units which are withdrawing will become affiliated directly with the Congress of Industrial Organizations through the National Council of Coke, Gas and Chemical Workers. The regional director has been in charge of Tennessee, Kentucky, North and South Carolina and Virginia.

He also announced the resignations of five of the regional organizers, B. T. Judd, Chattanooga; W. I. Smith, Memphis; J. R. Coope, Greenville, S. C.; C. W. Danenburg, Richmond, Va., and Greensboro, N. C., and Martin A. Watkins, formerly of Nashville, but now in the United States Army.

There are approximately 30 locals in the upper South District, Borah said, with a total membership of more than 3000. Virginia leads with 12 locals; Tennessee has 11. Borah said he could speak for a majority of the locals in announcing their withdrawal from U. M. W. In protest of policies of U. M. W. President Lewis, which "interfere with the country's war effort."

Borah submitted his letter of resignation to Kathryn Lewis, daughter of the U. M. W. president and secretary-treasurer of District 50, the subsidiary of U. M. W. which, Borah said, is used by Lewis to raid the jurisdiction of other unions "in an effort to break up the C. I. O."

Borah added that his instructions as director of the region were to "take everything that isn't nailed down and take that, too, if it isn't nailed down too tight."

600 Study Army Administration In New School

Organization of a new class of 325 Army officers at the Adjutant General's School, Fort Washington, Md., has brought the school's enrollment to the highest point in its short history with over 600 officers and officer candidates being trained in the executive and administrative functions of the nation's largest business, the Army of the United States.

Assigned to the Adjutant General's School from virtually all the arms and services, officers from the Army Ground Forces, Army Air Forces and Services of Supply are included in the new class. When the class is graduated its members will have been trained in a uniform system of administration without which the operation of the four-million-man Army might become chaotic.

The Adjutant General of a Field Army, an Army Corps or a Division is the "right arm" of the Commanding General, administering the organization as an executive according to policy laid down by the Commanding General, and coordinating the desired actions through the chains of command.

Instruction in the Officers School is practical and is divided into three main phases—business management, personnel management and Management of records.

Air Power Vital to Invasion Of Europe, Forum Is Told

An attempted invasion of Europe without overwhelming superiority in the air would be suicidal for the United States, America was warned last night by Maj. Alexander P. de Seversky, noted airplane designer, author and military analyst.

Such an undertaking would mean "immense losses without giving any substantial relief to the Russians on the Eastern Front," he told a Nation-wide radio audience on the American Forum of the Air, broadcast from Washington over the Mutual network.

His views were shared by William B. Ziff, publisher of aviation magazines, but partially disputed by Wythe Williams, the news analyst, and Brig. Gen. Henry J. Reilly, military expert. All participated in the forum debate which had for its topic, "Can the European Continent be invaded b Land and Sea?"

Concede Air Power's Importance

Both Reilly and Williams conceded the tremendous importance of air power, but both argued that an invasion of Germany by land and sea was essential to final victory.

Williams saw the possibility of conquering Germany by a continual rain of bombs, night after night and week after week, but contended sufficient planes and pilots for such a task are not available.

General Reilly said that "thanks to the tremendous power of modern aviation it is easier to invade Europe by land and sea than it ever has been before," and added:

"From Spain to Libya the victor has been the one who used air with land and sea forces; the loser the one who opposed such use."

Ziff and De Seversky pointed to the vast pool of ships which would be necessary for an invasion and the necessity of exposing them to enemy power. The lesson of Midway, they said, adequately showed the futility of placing such an armada anywhere within range of land-based aviation.

All-Out Aerial Offensive

"Under the present conditions," De Servesky said, "forced upon us by the facts of modern air power, we have no alternative but to concenrate upon all-out aerial offensive against Germany proper. In that way we do offer true relief to Russia, because we help to disarm Germany by smashing its industry, transport and fuel supplies—disorganizing and demoralizing the enemy. That's the only kind of cooperation we can now undertake.

"We must use our industrial capacity and productive genius to forge the weapon of air power and assume direct control of the skies over Europe. That's our job on the United Nations team, and the vital job that we can do for the gallant Red army."

American Creed To Be Perpetuated

Plans to celebrate next April the silver anniversary of the American's Creed, written in 1917 by William Tyler Page, emeritus minority clerk of the House, are being made under the direction of prominent legislators and other citizens who wish to perpetuate the document as the Creed of the United States of America, it was stated yesterday by Bertha Taylor Voorhorst, director of organization.

Mr. Page, whose sixtieth year of service in the House was celebrated recently, composed the American's Creed for a World War I contest and won a $1000 prize offered at that time by the City of Baltimore.

Plans for the celebration include introduction by Senator Capper (Republican), Kansas, and Representative Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia of legislation providing that April 3, 1943, be set aside as American's Creed Day and that the words be adopted as the Nation's official creed.

Ersatz Rubber To Cost Less Than Believed

By Sterling F. Green
Associated Press Staff Writer

With two major plants in production, Government officials have discovered that making synthetic rubber won't cost as much as they thought it would.

Money is no object in the 800,000-tons-a-year program, but Rubber Coordinator Arthur B. Newhall was pleased nevertheless yesterday to report that the program probably would not require all the $650,000,000 which Congress authorized for it.

"In fact, it may cost considerably less," the War Production Board official said.

Goodyear brought the first unit of the Government-financed synthetic plants into production in May, and Firestone the second in June. United States Rubber is scheduled to turn out buna in August, and B. F. Goodrich in November. The latter firm has had a small privately finished plant in operation some time with 1500 tons monthly capacity.

Oil and Alchol Used

As the program now stands, about three-fourths of the synthetic rubber is to come from use of a petroleum base and the remainder from use of alcohol.

However, the corn belt, supplying grain for alcohol, may play an even greater part in beating the rubber shortage.

A 200,000-ton increase in the program is under discussion. Farm-minded Senators are backing legislation to assure that this expansion would call for use of grain. The War Production Board's views may be disclosed today when Chairman Donald Nelson is to discuss this bill before an Agriculture Subcommittee headed by Senator Gillette (Democrat) of Iowa.

Lowered cost estimates of the synthetic program result in part from what WPB calls th "stripteasing" of specifications—the substitution of cheaper and more plentiful materials for steel plates, copper and other scarce metals in plant construction—and in part from the natural reduction of cost per ton because of mass production.

Despite the driblets of synthetic already coming in, a survey of the rubber situation at this time shows nothing immediately encouraging for the motorist who is worried about his tires.

Only 25,000 to 30,000 tons are expected this year, although a rate of 120,000 tons is scheduled to be reached by the year's end. Next year, unless forecasts are upset, only about 300,000 tons will be turned out, although by the end of 1943 the full production rate of 800,000 tons a year will have been attained.

Not until 1944 at the earliest will there be any synthetic rubber for the average civilian. The military will need every pound produced this year and next, responsible officials predict.

On another front, the scrap salvage drive, there is official pessimism. It appeared doubtful to most officials that the campaign ending next Friday would prove other than disappointing as it was described Tuesday when Secretary of the Interior Ickes reported only 218,998 tons salvaged. No more recent figures have been released. It requires about two tons of scrap to make one ton of reclaimed rubber, and the uses of the reclaimed product are limited.

and vests are to be maintained at the March levels.

Profit margins of manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers will be cut in many cases to enable manufacturers to produce clothing at their new ceilings to be sold by retailers at the levels of last March. But Henderson felt that margins would be adequate.

"Base" Periods Listed

Base periods fixed for various articles are as follows:

1. For suits and separate pants, coats and vests sold by manufacturers and wholesalers, sales booked from July to November, 1914.
2. For topcoats and overcoats sold by manufacturers and wholesalers, deliveries made from July to November, 1941.
3. For topcoats and overcoats sold by retailers, sales made during September, October and November, 1941.
4. For "tailored to the trade" and "made to measure" suits and separate pants, coats and vests, offering prices of last January and February, and for overcoats and topcoats sold by this same class of retailers, offering prices of September and October, 1941.

Council House Program Begins

A nursery school, sewing and cooking classes, splashing in the wading pool, softball and picnics will keep the youngsters busy at play at the Juanita K. Nye Council House, 609 Sixth Street Southwest, for the rest of the summer.

Director Myrtle Cohen expects nearly 50 children to make the council house their center of recreation and instruction under its expanded program. The youngest will attend the school from 9 a. m. to noon, beginning today, and the older ones will take over each afternoon at 2 o'clock.

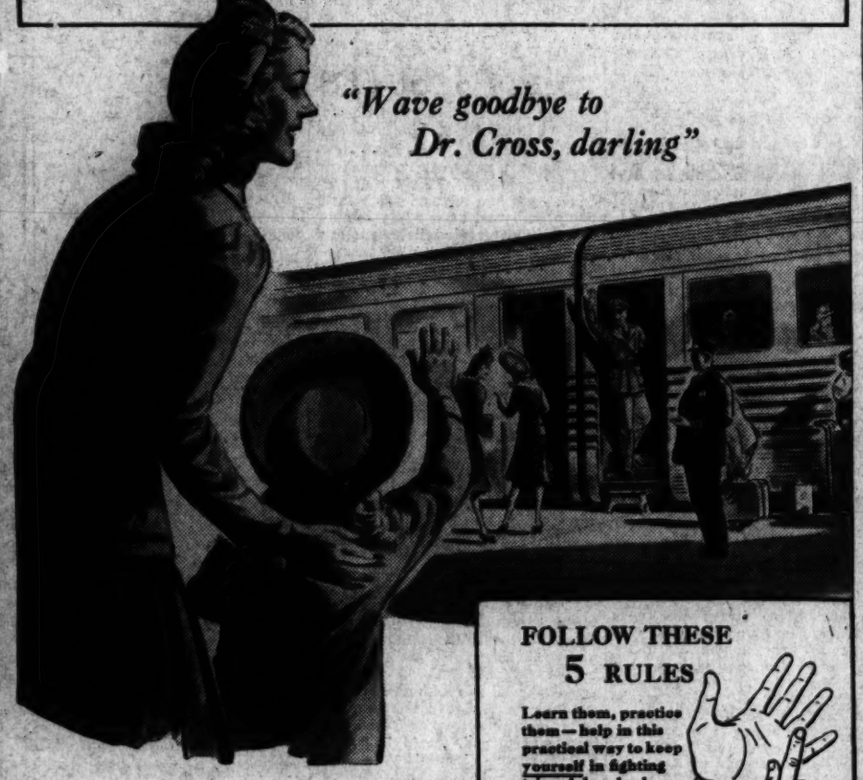
Just by KEEPING WELL You can help win this war!



WANT TO KNOW SOMETHING that you can do to hurry the victory we all want so much? Just keep well.

Nearly one-third of all our physicians, dentists, and nurses are going to war. The time of the remaining civilian medical forces is limited.

So, we simply mustn't get sick if we can possibly avoid it. If we do, we lose time from our jobs, upset our families, slow down the whole march to victory!

It's EASY to keep well

For example, think what great progress children's doctors have made! In a few minutes of a physician's time today your child can be completely immunized against such serious things as diphtheria and smallpox. And grownups can have the benefits of modern medical science as well.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, Editor of the Journal of The American Medical Association, puts it this way: "If all the people will follow a few commonsense rules of health, we will save millions of man-days of war work and save untold amounts of human misery."

(SPECIAL NOTE TO PARENTS: War puts a strain on children's nerves, scares them, worries them. Every parent should have a booklet on this subject called "Parents in Wartime." Send 5¢ to the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C. Ask for Children's Bureau, U. S. Dept. of Labor publication No. 282.)

FOLLOW THESE 5 RULES

Learn them, practice them—help in this practical way to keep yourself in fighting trim. A hundred million well Americans can't lose!

1. Eat right
Milk, butter, eggs, fish, meat, cheese, beans and peas, fruit, green leafy vegetables and the yellow ones, whole-grain or enriched cereals and bread—these are the key foods. Eat plenty of them. And eat 3 meals a day!

2. Get your rest
Regularity counts most. You can't catch up on lost sleep or missed relaxation! Try to keep on a regular schedule every day. Take it easy for a little while after lunch and dinner. Go to bed on time, get up on time.

3. See your doctor once a year
You have your car checked and serviced every thousand miles. Do as much for your body. Physicians can prevent many diseases and illnesses for both children and grownups nowadays. Give your doctor a chance now, BEFORE you get sick. Go to see him!

4. Keep clean
Plenty of baths, lots of soap. Clean hands, clothes, houses, beds! Get fresh air, sunshine. Drink lots of water.

5. "Play" some each day
Romp with the family, visit with friends, take walks, play games—or do whatever you like to give your mind and body a change from the daily grind on the job. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

Charter Committee

Energetic citizens of Montgomery County are once more attempting to bring about a reorganization of that county's obsolete governmental machinery. At an enthusiastic meeting in Bethesda this week they created the Montgomery County Charter Committee to work for the election of a nonpartisan charter board and the drafting of a county charter to be submitted to the vote of the people. Representative citizens from all parts of the county were named to the board of directors. The high caliber of the committee's personnel and its progressive aims give assurance that its influence will be felt.

This neighboring county, like Washington, is working under the handicap of a makeshift government that is no longer equipped to meet the problems of rapidly growing urban communities. Many suggestions for modernization of its legislative and administrative machinery have been made, culminating in the 1940 report of the Brookings Institution. Citizens have discovered, however, that if reforms are to be put into effect men and women of energy, determination and intelligence will have to fight for them. Progress toward better government in a democracy does not come through wishful thinking or even through casual visits to the polls.

District half-citizens may well be envious of the excellent beginning which their neighbors across the Maryland line have made. Those full-fledged citizens have the vote and some form of local government. They are pooling their strength because they want a new charter and better government. In the District we have no charter at all and no local government that can be called our own. The local problems that demand solution are manifold. Yet we have heard of no District charter committee or similar spearhead of political action being organized here. What is holding us back?

Union Accounting

The issue of union security has seemingly raised its head again in the case of the Caterpillar Tractor Co. of Peoria, Ill. The word "seemingly" is used advisedly because it is not the question of union security that is of primary concern at the moment, but a closely related issue of union responsibility. Dr. Frank P. Graham, a public representative on the WLB, points out that the maintenance of membership clause, although rejected by employer members of the board in the present instance, is "identical with that voted for by half the employer members participating in two previous cases, the majority of the employers participating in another case, and all of the employers voting in the Phelps-Dodge case."

It is fair to assume that this series of decisions has established the principle of union security (maintenance of membership). Such, indeed, is the conclusion reached by the employer members of the WLB who dissented from the majority in the Peoria case. Therefore they add, and with good reason, that if unions are to be protected against loss of dues-paying members, the unions in turn should be held to a strict accounting. Specifically, they demand that the unions furnish the WLB twice yearly with a statement of receipts and expenditures, amount of dues, initiation fees, names of officers, etc.

Unquestionably, a financial accounting should be required of the unions by law, and the data should be made a matter of public record. But it is not the function of the WLB to insist upon such an accounting. That is a matter calling for legislative action. The dissent of the employer representatives in the present case serves chiefly to direct public attention to the failure of Congress to pass legislation holding unions to strict accountability for the collection and expenditure of funds.

Nevertheless, the employers' tactics are open to criticism because they are likely to reopen questions relating to union security at a critical moment when the so-called "Little Steel" case is before the WLB for decision. The board has tried hard to dispose of this difficult problem by means of a compromise formula that employers could—and have—accepted. It might lead to serious labor disturbances and might gain for employer representatives an unenviable reputation for obstructing peaceful settlements of disputes if this question is linked with another controversial issue which is not a proper concern of the WLB.

War Of Paper

Any close observer of our war effort must have noticed the vast amount of time, energy and money that has gone into the preparation of reports and the collection of data. Hundreds of bureaucrats have been fighting the war furiously from behind typewriters and filing cabinets filled with answers to a seemingly endless series of questionnaires. And in altogether too many instances they have kept up their war of paper with little regard for what other agencies of the Government have been doing.

Now, of course, numerous reports and communications are necessary to the fighting of a war as well as to the routine conduct of Government business. It is only when vast information-gathering agencies get in the way of the fighting brigades and production squads that trimming and reorganization become imperative. And that is precisely what has happened in many agencies doing war work. In the War Department, for example, it was found that nearly 1000 recurring reports were being made between the various bureaus. Efficiency experts from the Budget Bureau found that many hundreds of these reports could be eliminated without in any way detracting from the war effort. Indeed, the effect was greatly to improve efficiency and to save a million pages of paper, to say nothing of the time of employes.

Companies turning out war materials have been particularly bedeviled by the stream of questionnaires from Government agencies. One rubber company reported to the Senate committee studying the problems of small business that it spends $100,000 a year in answering Government questionnaires. Even more serious than this cost is the fact that such detailed work often slows down the production of the implements of war. Here again it is necessary for the Government to have comprehensive information about the Nation's industry, but it is not necessary for business and industry to repeat the same basic facts to a great variety of Federal bureaus that have failed to cooordinate their own research divisions.

The good news of the moment, then, is the announcement by Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the WPB, of a committee to supervise the issuance of questionnaires and to eliminate duplications and unnecessary work in this field. In addition to the chairman, this committee will consist of representatives from the War and Navy Departments, various units within the WPB and an advisor from the Budget Bureau. To give the committee a good start in its work Mr. Nelson has declared a moratorium on questionnaires until September 30. Hereafter war industries will not be burdened with demands for information unless the committee finds that such data are not available and that they are essential to the war effort.

The Budget Bureau has already done some good work in this field. While the WPB's decision to attack useless red tape was long in coming, there is every reason to believe that the committee will approach the problem with vigor and determination. It has a unique opportunity to help speed up our preparedness for world-wide combat, and, incidentally, to cut off needless expenses.

Preventing Sabotage

Attorney General Biddle states that no large-scale act of sabotage was committed in this country during the six months following the outbreak of war. We may be sure that this excellent record is not due to sheer good luck or to lack of enterprise on the part of the enemy. It is undoubtedly explained in the main by the extensive preventive work done by the FBI and other branches of the Department of Justice in rounding up suspicious characters, segregating and interning dangerous enemy aliens, and breaking up seditious organizations in our midst. The apprehension and prompt sentencing of numerous persons found guilty of espionage or acts of sabotage has also been a deterrent to acts of violence.

The value of this work has been proved by the results to date. But there can be no relaxation of vigilance based on a false sense of security. For the Attorney General warns us that "the threat to our internal security deepens with each day that the war continues." The fact that saboteurs have been landed on these shores from submarines shows to what lengths the enemy is prepared to go to gain his ends. Because he has failed once is no guarantee that other and equally bold attempts will not be made.

Value Of History

Like many other public men, Justice Robert H. Jackson has been deeply impressed by the results of a New York Times survey showing that large numbers of students graduate from college without having a single course in United States history. In an address before the Texas Bar Association, the Justice called this seeming indifference toward American history an "ominous symptom of waning vigor of American democracy." He made an extremely persuasive appeal for a revival of interest in the study of our own past as a preparation for dealing intelligently with the problems of the present and the future. "History is to a people," he said, "what memory is to an individual. It calls t the aid of present judgment the accumulations of past experience."

While Justice Jackson lashed out rather severely—and in our opinion with undue harshness—against those who oppose the required study of history, he admitted that a mere requirement that colleges teach the history and philosophy of democracy is not enough. The real danger that we must fight is apathy—lack of interest at the college stage of education in the development of our democratic institutions.

That deadening apathy is itself often a product of bad teaching in the elementary schools. It is not going to be overcome by what Justice Jackson calls a "self-serving shallow nationalism that belittles the accomplishments of other peoples." Belief in democracy will be more firmly rooted, as he points out, by honest and critical courses in American history which do not gloss over mistakes and deficiencies or overemphasize achievements. In short, we want to know ourselves, not to arouse unthinking enthusiasms. For, as the speaker said, there is "little reason to believe that a people with no knowledge of its own history will have much capacity to direct its own destiny."

In The Aleutians

It is good news that Army and Navy Air Force bombers operating from undisclosed bases in the Alaskan area have been hammering away at Japanese invasion forces in the Aleutians. The tendency, noticeable in some Washington quarters at first, to write off the occupation of Attu and Kiska islands as little more than a face-saving Japanese gesture has given way to a more realistic appreciation of the very real dangers involved in permitting the enemy to retain and develop the foothold he has obtained in the Aleutians.

That it is obviously their purpose to exploit their conquests in this area is indicated by the fact that on July 2 an American patrol plane spotted three Japanese transports with escorting vessels off the island of Agattu, about 35 miles southeast of Attu. This convoy was bombed by Army planes, but the damage they inflicted on the enemy is not known. Even if the attack was completely successful, however, there can be no assurance either that previous convoys did not get through safely or that others are not on the way. The fact is clear that the various raids carried out by Army and Navy bombing planes against the Japanese-held islands in the Aleutians have not yet, whether for reasons of bad weather or for other reasons, been sufficient to drive the enemy out of the captured islands.

The situation does not lend itself to a complacent attitude. For, as is pointed out by Anthony J. Dimond, the Alaskan delegate in Congress, the successful establishment of a big Japanese base for land aircraft at Kiska would threaten all American naval operations in those waters. Such a base would also be a threat to the Russian islands adjoining the Aleutians and thus constitute a dangerous barrier to the flow of supplies from the United States to Siberia in the event the latter region is attacked by Japan.

Demagoguery

Mr. Murray is reported as saying that if the War Labor Board does not grant the dollar-a-day wage demand of the Little Steel workers, it will be "a victory for Hitler." Just the opposite would be nearer the mark. Certainly it would be a victory for Hitler if the rising tide of purchasing power swept over the restraining walls of our price structure. We should find our war effort stultified, and, what should be important to Mr. Murray, the worker's dollar would be ruined.

Inflation can be even a worse scourge than war. At least Germany found it worse, if the testimony of Herr Grassmann, representative of German labor, may be cited as witness. Speaking before the Dawes Committee in 1923, Herr Grassmann said the German workers could not withstand another period of inflation. He appealed to the world to give Germany a stable currency "which would render it possible for them to buy something with their wages even four weeks after they had received them." The grant of the Little Steel demand would be a victory for inflation. And inflation, which brings economic chaos in its train, would prepare the ground for an American Hitler.

ON ENTERING A STUDY

I have heard thinkers say they toiled at night
With one they loved beside them, who could make
The labor easy; and the chamber bright,
Since all they did was for the dear one's sake.

Now in this goodly company I claim
A portion, not for merits of my own;
But I have dared to call upon a name
As proud and fair as any they have known.
Oh I could tell them of a room I had,
A room that is no longer wholly mine,
But his, who makes the lonely midnight glad.
Then let them, with their cleverness, divine
How he can come, to spend these hours with me,
Across 3000 miles of war-swept sea.

Eight Miles For Business

Information all around the subject of a supplemental gasoline ration for those who use their cars in going to and from work continues to be issued voluminously by the OPA and circulated in the newspapers, but the really critical question that everyone wants to know about remains unanswered. I have asked, and been asked, and heard others ask almost daily since the plan for prolonged gasoline rationing was first announced for clarification of this question, but none has been forthcoming. The same confusion existed in the interpretation of the A and B cards as originally issued, and it is being carried along into the extended rationing system.

The question specifically is this: Will supplemental ration cards be issued to members of car clubs that include at least four persons even if the daily mileage of each in "business driving" comes within the range of the basic ration card? If so, will the supplemental ration be issued to only one member of the club, or also to others, it being understood that all share their cars and drive in rotation?

Present instructions are clear that all motorists will receive the same basic allowance for what may be called "incidental driving," consisting of personal errands and even pleasure trips if they wish to save up their gasoline for this purpose. This allowance is slightly less than 8 miles a day, assuming a rate of 13 miles per gallon. If a person shares his car for transportation to and from work with three other persons, each driving his car in turn, the average mileage of each is likely to fall within this allowance so that strictly no extra gasoline would be needed to provide them with business transportation, but they would sacrifice part or all of their allowance for incidental trips. Thus a person would be penalized for using his own vehicle instead of depending on public carriers, and this would be true even if he became a public carrier himself to the extent of operating a car pool. This would be contrary to the policy of getting the maximum out of all potential transportation.

The question is whether any regular business use of one's car, including the transportation of extra passengers, is to be accepted as grounds for claiming a supplemental gasoline ration, or will such claim be considered only when the average mileage for business use is greater than the basic allowance of 8 miles per day obtainable for unspecified purposes on an A card?

Will the OPA make this point clear? FREEMAN WEISS.

Disunifying Appointments

Disunity can defeat us!

When will the Administration, so astute in many strategies, face its responsibility for the lack of spontaneity from thoughtful, responsible, deeply loyal Americans toward Administration pleas—via radio and press—for a united effort?

Political expediency, fair or foul, the doctrine of a strong minority, should not be permitted to strangle the war effort. This is no time for political craftiness in the interest of self or party perpetuation.

How can loyalty to a common purpose which could bring about the realization of "a happy and contented life for all" (Mr. Hull's phrase) ever be attained when our President affronts us and the dignity of his exalted station, as well, with reprehensible Hague and Pendergast appointments to high offices over the heads of rightful sources? Confidence is a very important ingredient of morale; why continue to break it down rather than build it up? DEBORAH D. ANDREWS.

A Living Wage

As I soberly read that the proposed bill for a 10 per cent raise, or overtime pay, for United States war workers may not be passed by our spineless Congressmen, I wonder how the thousands of women, like myself, who have growing children to support, and men with heavy family responsibilities, will meet the following actual demands to be met by our meager CAF salary checks:

1. The retirement reduction taken from our salary checks on July 1, 1942, raised from 3½ per cent to 5 per cent.

2. The family income tax base exemption lowered to $1,200 (while high-salaried married couples will be allowed to make separate tax returns).

3. Food, particularly meat, a daily necessity, allowed to increase in cost to an almost prohibitive price for low-salaried people.

4. The most serious problem we face is the forced 10 per cent savings that is to be deducted from our low salary check.

If our salary increase is ever passed, and if it amounts to only 10 per cent, it takes no Einstein to see that the 10 per cent savings plan will completely absorb the raise. We war workers will be left to face the other three additional burdens; and this on a check that has never increased as compared to the increases in the checks of employes in private industry.

We thousands of women war workers here in Washington, who are the sole support of children, are reminded daily by radio and newspaper that "nutrition will help win the war." Our daily diet should include a serving of meat, eggs, raw and green vegetables, fruit and milk. What a tragic waste of money and effort is being spent. For we in the low-salaried group, which includes only people earning up to $2300 a year, are here in Washington already living at a dangerously low subsistence level.

Promoting Snobbery

After reading Wednesday's Post article, "Senate Ponders Name for Navy Girls," my ire has been steadily rising at the injustice of the provisions of this bill.

In the Navy are many fine girls who have given years to the work that the new auxiliary will be called upon to do, and whose work has been perfectly satisfactory in every way.

These girls have given many hours of overtime gladly. Many have been denied pay raises and at the same time refused the privilege of transferring to an agency where the chances of promotion are greater.

Now, because they have been unable to have the required college degree, they are denied also the opportunity to become officers in the new organization, which will be given to girls with no experience.

To my mind the bill should be amended to allow girls who have had experience in statistical work—coding and communications—and who are recommended by their superiors, to have an equal opportunity with the untried college grads.

Our beloved President has stressed equality of opportunity for all but if ever a bill promoted snobbery, this one is the prize of all time.

Local Boy Bites Back

I am a native Washingtonian. I can remember when, just a few years ago, we had a nice, quiet, little town. Well-l-l, perhaps it wasn't so quiet—Congress was here then, too. But it was a nice little town. Then, all of a sudden 500,000 Government workers came barging into our 10 square miles, and started screaming that the place is crowded!

Now, listen, Ed, I don't mind their coming here, and I don't mind their acting as if they "own the joint," and I don't like the fact that, when I tell them that I am a Washingtonian they invariably take three steps backward and stare in utter amazement. As if to say, "My God! I wonder if it's contagious!" Then they start unloading their complaints on me, as if I were to blame.

Their most frequent complaint is that everything is too expensive in Washington. The rent is too high. The food is too high. The clothes are too high. "I'm working for the landlord" is the usual cry. "Can't save a cent." Then, in the same breath, they yell, "There's no place to spend your money in this burg—no night clubs, no this, no that—no nothin'." I don't know. You figure it out—I'm tired.

Then there are the girls. Ah, the poor little working girls, who are so lonesome here because they can't find dates. Most of them came here, in the first place, because they couldn't get a date back home in dear ol' Snowflake, Ariz. They complain that there aren't enough men in the Nation's Capital. Why, if you'd take all the soldiers and sailors who hang around loose in this town over the weekend, and lay them end to end, they'd look like Hitler's army in Russia! My advice to those girls is to pitch in and do a little USO work.

Then there are the New Yorkers. You know them—they come to Washington and expect to find New York. Nothing here is as good as it is in New York—not even the other New Yorkers. I took one of them sightseeing the other day, and every time I'd show him something he'd tell me about something in the Big City that would top it. He kept asking me: "How long did it take to build this building? How long did it take to build that one?" And, of course, every time I'd tell him he'd let me know about a similar building in New York which took only half as long to build. Finally, I got fed up with that stuff, and when he pointed to the Washington Monument and said, "How long did it take to build that?" I popped: "I don't know. That wasn't here yesterday!"

But, all kidding aside, I'd like to make the newcomers happy here. I'd like to turn on the old Southern hospitality. But they won't let me. They love to complain. Well, here's hoping they have a complaining good time.

Sign Language

The following incident may interest you and deserve as much publicity as you can give it.

This morning, waiting for the bus at my usual corner, I noticed a car parked at the curb, bearing a big sign. On the sign it stated, "Am leaving in a few minutes for Fourteenth & L Streets. Can accommodate five. Step right in."

Are there any medals for such as he?

No "damn the inefficient British" on that sign. No "damn the blundering Democrats." No "gimme double time on Sundays." Just "have room for five, pile right in."

My God, Mr. Editor, we are going to win this war yet. C. F. V.

The Post Impressionist

Roman Holiday

"Back in my apartment I packed a suitcase full of warm clothes and was delivered to a new group of jailers at a little fourth-rate hotel, the Pension Suquet."

TEDDY LYNCH—"Reunion in Siena," Life Magazine June 29, 1942.

A few years ago I stayed at the Pension Suquet, which Miss Lynch describes as one of the jails in Rome which she shared with the other interned newspaper correspondents. The Italian authorities could not have picked a better place for a jail, although it is a mystery to me how they knew of its existence.

I came across the Pension Suquet by an unfortunate chance. It was in 1936. After a year in Europe my friend and I were tired of foreigners and longed to see one genuine American college boy. Fate produced him for us in Perugia. He was tall, bearded, only slightly knock-kneed under gray flannel shorts, rode a motorbike, and came from California. In other words, he was perfect, and to top our joy he had a friend.

We saw Perugia with them. We heard tales of tramp steamers, camping, hardships, and bathless journeys. We heard tales in which the phrases, "sleeping on the floor," "scratching flea bites," and "bedbug hunting" predominated. We also heard about the Pension Suquet. Our heroes, and they were our heroes by this time, had just come from Rome. They described the Suquet as "40 cents a night with breakfast. . . kind of unpretentious, but not bad if you want to save money." We wanted to save money.

We arrived in Rome supperless, at about eleven o'clock. We lugged our bags to an ancient taxi and gave the driver the address of the Suquet. He looked puzzled. We meandered through main streets and side streets. We stopped and looked in phone books. We inquired of policemen but nobody had ever heard of the Pension Suquet. Finally the driver asked one of his friends, and, after a few more minutes of bumping between narrow buildings we stopped. We both peered into a dimly lighted alley. Alice jabbed me, and pointed silently. There in front of us, at the side of a small doorway the tarnished inscription, "Pension Suquet" gleamed dully. In front of it on the street was seated a woman about fifty-five years old. She was dressed in a black frock of the Mother Hubbard variety which is not supposed to show the dirt, but did. Her feet were encased in bedroom slippers over which gray-black stockings tumbled. Her face was mud colored with eyes to match.

Alice shook herself. "Gosh," she muttered unsteadily, "the boys certainly were tough." I agreed a bit shakily, then remembered that it was too late to go anywhere else that night. I pulled myself together and said belligerently that we were as tough as they were, wern't we? Alice, with a resigned nod explained to the proprietress that we would like a room.

"Si si. We have a beautiful room, just for you, over the courtyard. Running water." Our opinions of our heroes rose. Room over courtyard, running water at forty cents with breakfast. You couldn't tell anything by the outside of a place. We followed the woman down a dark passageway, and climbed a narrow stairway. On the way we met several leering Italians with grimy shirts open at the throat showing a virile amount of unwashed chest. We went down another passageway, turned two corners, and then the Signora, with a gesture of "Behold!" flung open the door to our room.

We beheld and wished we hadn't. Our quarters, lit by a dim bulb swinging from the ceiling, indeed looked out on a courtyard. We clattered across the stone floor to gaze on a magnificent view of blowing laundry, and rolling garbage cans. Voices rose in voluble gaiety from the neighboring windows. We glanced at the beds. The Signora, noticing our rather greenish expressions, said cheerfully that she would immediately change the sheets. We listened dully to the running water. It was certainly running. It couldn't be stopped. Alice, who was busily examining the taps, did not notice that our hostess had returned with two clean sheets instead of four. She did a quick change, then, with an oily "Buona Notte," she eased herself out of the room.

"Alice," I stammered, "I think that we had better wear long sleeves and stockings tonight. You never know . . . just what you may find in these places." Alice gave an involuntary scratch and dragged a sweater from her suitcase. Over her dotted pajamas she drew her stockings. I did the same, put on a navy and white crew sweater over my purple zigzag trousers, and tied a bandanna around my hair. Alice managed a feeble grin at her own statement that I looked like a nightmare of Aunt Jemima. I managed nothing except to tie up the water tap in my washrag so that it wouldn't drip. We lowered ourselves, like pearl divers unsure of their depths, into our beds.

Miss Lynch does not say how many days she was interned at the Pension Suquet by the Italian Government. We spent one night but we didn't wait to find out how the breakfast was.

Japan And Siberia

By Barnet Nover

Gathering Clouds In Eastern Siberia

VLADIVOSTOK, say the Japanese, is a pistol pointed at Japan's heart.

That is precisely what they used to say about Korea and later about Manchuria. We know what happened. Both Korea and Manchuria have been absorbed by Japan. Will Eastern Siberia now suffer the same fate?

NOVER

Chungking says so and Chungking's sources of information regarding Japan's military activities on the mainland have been proved excellent. For some time, it is reported from the Chinese capital, large numbers of Japanese troops have been pouring into Manchuria. The already considerable Japanese garrison in that region has thus been strengthened.

This concentration of Japanese military might in a region remote from the present fighting zones in the Far East can only have one purpose, namely, to attack Eastern Siberia.

THIS IS a plausible theory and has much to substantiate it.

Air power has made Eastern Siberia more important to Japan than ever. General Doolittle's raid on Tokyo, Osaka and Nagoya has taught the Japanese how vulnerable their country is to air bombing and Vladivostok is less than 700 miles from those cities.

The question arises why if the possession of Vladivostok and Russia's maritime provinces are as important to Japan's security as the Japanese believe, they have made no effort to occupy them.

The answer is that after the battles of Changkufeng Hill in 1937 and Nomanhan in 1939, test battles with the Russians in which the Japanese got much the worst of it, the Japanese have had a healthy respect for the Red forces in Siberia and are not likely to take them on again unless and until the chances of a speedy and decisive victory are overwhelming. Furthermore, the Japanese have so far gambled on the belief, and gambled correctly, that Russia is anxious to avoid war with them and will therefore bar the use of Siberia as a base of United Nations air operations.

ONE OTHER consideration may also have operated to restrain the Japanese from attacking Siberia before now. That is that war with the Soviet Union, even with Russia's main energies absorbed in the struggle in Europe, would be fraught with danger so long as Japan has not eliminated all danger of a flanking attack upon her.

In this connection a meaning and a purpose can be found in the occupation of the western Aleutians and in the large-scale operations in China other than those that are evident on the surface.

The occupation of Attu and Kiska can be steps preliminary for an attack on Alaska. But they can also serve as the prelude to an assault on Siberia. The Japanese offensive in Chekiang Province would, if wholly successful, ultimately enable Japan to send her troops by rail all the way from Shanghai to Singapore, thus easing the strain on her depleted shipping resources.

Also, by depriving the Allies of air bases in China from which Japanese cities and Japanese concentrations on the mainland can be bombed, Japan would at the same time secure her flank in the event she launched an offensive against Siberia. And if as a consequence of the present large-scale military efforts in China, the armies of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek are destroyed or so weakened as to be no further threat to the Japanese for some time, the forces which Japan could then hurl against Russia would be overwhelmingly greater than those which the Soviet Union could possibly muster in Siberia at this time.

By the same token, however, a huge force could be employed by Japan for an attack on India should Tokyo decide that observance of the nonaggression pact with Russia pays her greater dividends than an assault on Siberia is likely to do.

What the Japanese do not forget is that a campaign against Russia that did not end in a speedy victory might be fatal to Japan's chances. For then Japan would be left wide open to air attacks from Siberian bases and the menace of Russia's submarines and would also be cut off from one of her principal sources of food—the fish catch of Kamchatka.

THE PRESENT fighting in China provides the key that the Japanese hope will unlock not one door but two—the door to Siberia and also the door to India while, at the same time, locking the door through which the Allies can pour their air strength for an attack on the Japanese Islands.

This week marks the end of five years of fighting in China. The Chinese have performed prodigies of valor. For years and against seemingly hopeless odds they fought the Japanese alone.

Pearl Harbor provided China with a host of rich and powerful allies. But we must recognize that in the months since Pearl Harbor China's position has deteriorated rather than improved. Despite the enormous importance not only of keeping her in the fight but of strengthening her to the point where her armies can taken the offensive, only a driblet of supplies have reached her.

It is heartening to note that every Chinese leader, from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek down, has assured the Allies that China will fight on. These assurances are encouraging. But they should not make us complacent. They should only determine us to leave no stone unturned in providing China with the arms and supplies she needs to continue the fight. Because of the failure to send sufficient aid to China in the past, a golden opportunity was allowed to slip through our fingers. Now time is running short.

Justice Roberts Says Defeat Would Mean 'World Tragedy'

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 5.—A defeat for the United Nations "would mean a world of terror and tragedy," Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts said today.

"It would mean an insane world where a few men at the top of the heap would live out their hysterical lives trampling the millions under their heels," he said in an address prepared for delivery in connection with a concert of the C. B. S. Summer Symphony Program.

"But," he asserted, "the Axis will not win. Twenty-eight peoples, on every continent, have signed a solemn agreement with their blood, pledging to fight on until freedom and sanity return to a tired earth."

Success, the jurist said, will be achieved only if the United Nations remain united, in war and in peace.

"Once let the tide of nationalistic prejudice and suspicion sweep over us, and we are lost to the enemy," he continued. "He sees that as clearly as we must. That is why the Axis strives always to split our unity asunder. That is why those who criticize Britain for her mistakes, without knowing all the facts, are endangering their lives and our lives as well. That is why, whatever some of us may have thought of the Soviet philosophy in the past, we must remember that Russia's fight is our fight, and that we must help her as she is helping us. That is why we must acclaim the emergence of China as a great and enlightened world power, newest and yet oldest in the family of nations."

U.S.O. Fund Drive Tops $13,000,000

With rural districts about even with city contributors, United Service Organizations headquarters in New York announced yesterday that $13,322,742 of its spring and summer 20-million-dollar quota had been raised.

New York leads in volume with $4,850,648.87, while New Mexico is ahead on a percentage basis, having pledged $88,000, or 135 per cent of its goal. The Norfolk Navy Yard at Portsmouth, Va., raised $28,754.13.

Allies Rake Two Jap Air Bases

United Nations Headquarters in Australia (Monday), July 6 (U.P.).—One enemy plane was shot down and four others were damaged when Allied planes again attacked the Japanese bases at Lae and Salahaus, in New Guinea, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced today.

The attacks, described as "heavy" in the communique, were against enemy installations, and large fires were observed in the target areas.

The In-Shore Patrol On Job

By J. Norman Lodge

Out-Shore, Too

WITH the Atlantic In-Shore Patrol, at Sea, (Delayed) (Wide World).—The lads in the Coast Guard are men's men.

For instance, take the men on the 83-foot sub-chasers, who by day and by night guard merchant ships between coastal ports and often go hundreds of miles to sea join transatlantic convoys in spite of the term "in-shore patrol."

These frail craft, drawing only 6 feet of water, of 15-foot beam and toting depth charges along with machine guns, are manned by a crew of 12—assuming a couple of them aren't hospitalized because of injuries.

The sturdy American lads who man these craft seek no glory; all they ask is a fair break, liberty once in a while to visit their families, and anonymity. They get plenty of anonymity but little liberty, for their stint calls for continuous duty.

THE MERCHANTMEN must sail and they must be protected. That's where the Coast Guard comes into its own.

But recently taken into the regular Navy from the Treasury Department, they feel their orphanage, for none of them are Annapolis men and even among the commissioned rank the majority are ratings who have temporary stripes and revert to their permanent rating as chief petty officer after the war.

Take, for instance, Ensign John Dhue, lanky seafaring man of 18 years service, mostly with the Alaskan patrol. Years before Pearl Harbor, Dhue, now operating out of Morehead City, N. C., sensed the Japanese peril. From Alaska to Attu and Dutch Harbor he chased Japanese "fishermen" to see that no narcotics were landed on American soil.

"Everyone of them had a camera," Dhue told me while on patrol with his subchaser recently. "And strangely enough, the craft they had could outrun us by five or six knots."

DHUE, a family man, perhaps epitomizes the Coast Guard service. He's 6 feet tall, weighs about 160, is wind-burned with that salty look that comes from years at sea, and talks salty language. He makes no bones about his commission which, he points out, is only protocol. He's still a chief petty officer at heart.

He hasn't the star the Navy wears, but he's just as proud of his silver shield, the badge of the guard.

Of course, aboard a sub-chaser there's little room for rank, so the only differentiation is that he sits at first mess along with his chiefs.

And the chiefs, Allan Lundberg, of Finnish descent with 20 years' service and a chief bo'sun, and Dick Caspar, chief machinist's mate who is called "the best damned motor man in all the U. S. services," share their mess with the top-ranking of the crew, mostly petty officers.

ON DHUE'S boat only 3 of the 12-man crew are not rated. And that trio are all able-bodied seamen. The line-up after Lundberg and Caspar includes Elliot, machinist's mate first class; Sankiewicz, coxswain first class; Newman, ship's cook first class, and then range down to second and third class petty officers.

Because two of the crew suffered injuries in recent patrols, the men stand four and four watches—that is four hours on and four off duty.

If you don't think that is tough, try it sometime. In fact, just try to get four hours' sleep on a 72-hour patrol! If you succeed you're a marvel, for these little craft pitch and roll on a calm sea.

If you go below where there are six bunks forward, you won't sleep, for you'll be picking yourself up out of the gangway most of the time. The stifling heat below is conducive to seasickness, and even old salts get that feeling in the confines of the narrow bunk space.

So the lads sleep on deck. To keep from rolling across the deck, they lash themselves either to the machine-gun stanchions or to the depth charge carriages.

BUT LET'S go to sea with one of these craft. Let's assume you're taking a convoy from one coast port to another.

You have 400 gallons of fresh water and food for 60 hours. Your convoy is listed for 9 knots, but because some skippers are timorous the convoy slows down to 6. That means your chaser is running on one motor most of the time and circling astern so that the convoy isn't left behind.

Your sound-detecting device is functioning. Your sound man is below, talking constantly to the wheel. You must differentiate between the sounds from ships of your own convoy and enemy ships. Suddenly the information from below tells you that off the starboard bow there are suspicious sounds.

"Battle stations" sounds. From the bow and from the stern, from the galley and from the bunks, the men turn to.

Dhue mans the lookout, a station just aft of the wheel with two brass rails of 1-inch diameter for his foothold. He freezes binoculars to his eyes and scans the seas. Suddenly, perhaps a mile to starboard, he sees something suspicious.

"Periscope!" he shouts.

Caspar unleashes the lashings from the depth charges. And the 83-footer, built like a lady's vanity case and just about as fragile, speeds over the waves in the direction of the trouble.

ARRIVING at the spot this craft, always up-hill from stern to stem, leaps to the fray like a well-trained greyhound.

"Release charges!" shouts Caspar, and two cans go overboard.

You've hardly got 50 feet away when a terrific explosion causes the seas to vomit. With the spray leaping 75 feet into the air, your fragile craft leaves the water. Again and again charges are released, and again and again your craft hurdles its natural habitat.

Tensed at the three machine-guns are Newman, Sankiewicz and Elliot, waiting, waiting, waiting for the words from Dhue that a periscope is visible.

Suddenly you feel as though a policeman is tapping your soles as you lay on a park bench. It's the heavy calibre barking out its defiance to the Axis.

Now all your depth charges are gone. You circle looking for telltale oil slicks. Perhaps you find them. That entitles you to one star on your bridge cowl. Perhaps you don't. And you rev up your motors to catch up to your convoy.

CALMLY the cook leaves his machine gun, goes below to see that the coffee urn is full. One by one the men go below for that black fluid that keeps them alert.

And Dhue notes in his log the reason for having dropped the depth charges.

Later, much later, you arrive at destination. You turn your convoy over to an off-shore escort that will take the ships to our Allies. And then you go to a nearby dock, gas up, take on water, and learn that you'll be southbound with another convoy within the next few hours.

That's the Coast Guard, now part of the Navy . . .

The boys who think nothing of being at sea 50 out of every 60 days . . .

The boys who, after convoying south to north and north to south arrive back in port expecting liberty but who took in good grace the information that come morning—and it was then 4 a. m. —they'd be back at sea taking well laden merchantmen to a northern port en route to Europe.

Drake's Drum

By Mark Sullivan

A Noble Ballad Recalled

REFLECTING upon what use could best be made of this column of newspaper space, at a time when holiday celebration of our national past coincides with deep concern about our future and that of our great ally—reflecting upon that, and frustrated by my own inadequacy, it occurred to me to reprint a poem. "Drake's Drum" is about one of England's heroes, who, more than three centuries ago, helped save her from the Spanish Armada, the greatest threat she ever knew before the present one. It is one of the most stirring ballads in the English tongue, and movingly appropriate today. I know of no verse, or other form of appeal to men's spirits, so likely to evoke the courage and resolution that is England's heritage.

SULLIVAN

BUT ENOUGH of talk about the poem—let it speak for itself. Because it is written in the archaic Devonshire dialect of Drake's time and place, I have changed a few words to their modern forms, and need to explain others. "Ware" is an obsolete English word for a quality not adequately expressed by either "aware," or "wary"—the ancient word means vitally alert, on guard against danger and challenge, prepared for it and welcoming it. "Plymouth Hoe" is the strand along Plymouth's waterfront, where Drake anchored his ship, the Golden Hind, times when he was home from the sea. "The Dons" are the Spaniards of the sixteenth century. "Slung atween the round shot" means that Drake's hammock was hung where the ship's cannon-balls were stored. "The trades" is an English sailor's abbreviation for the trade winds of the Caribbeans, where Drake fought the battles of his early career, and where, years later, after his heroic feats in English waters, he returned to die at Nombre Dios Bay.

I print, too, the brief historical introduction which precedes the poem: "Sir Francis Drake, a native of Devonshire, of which Plymouth is the main port, gained fame as a privateer on Spanish commerce in the days of Elizabeth. When in 1585 the 'Invincible Armada' appeared off the port of Plymouth, Drake, Hawkins, Howard, Frobisher, and others fell upon them in the rear and harassed them up the Channel, past Calais, to destruction."

WITH THIS introduction, read a noble ballad:

Drake he's in his hammock an' a thousand mile away,
(Captain, art thou sleepin' there below?)
Slung atween the round shot in Nombre Dios Bay,
An' dreamin' all the time o' Plymouth Hoe.
Yonder looms the island, yonder lie the ships,
Wi' sailor lads a-dancin' heel-an'-toe.
An' the shore-lights flashin', an' the night-tide dashin',
He sees it all as plainly as he saw it long ago.

Drake he was a Devon man, an' ruled the Devon seas,
(Captain, art thou sleepin' there below?)
Rovin' tho' his death fell, he went wi' heart at ease,
An' dreamin' all the time o' Plymouth Hoe.
"Take my drum to England, hang it by the shore,
Strike it when your powder's runnin' low;
If the Dons sight Devon, I'll quit the port o' Heaven,
An' drum them up the Channel as we drummed them long ago."

Drake he's in his hammock till the great Armadas come,
(Captain, art thou sleepin' there below?)
Slung atween the round shot, listenin' for the drum,
An' dreamin' all the time o' Plymouth Hoe.
Call him on the deep sea, call him up the Sound,
Call him when ye sail to meet the foe;
Where the old trade's plyin' an' the old flag's flyin',
They shall find him ware an' wakin', as they found him long ago.

TODAY England's powder is running low—it is time to strike Drake's drum. This poem is symbolism. What it means to the simple folk whose thought it expresses, is not merely that they expect another Drake to come to lead them, nor that they should wait for him—but rather that the spirit of Drake shall enter every English heart.

The symbolism is for America, too. "They shall find him ware an' wakin'" describes what our fighting men were in the Coral Sea and at Wake Island—but what, unfortunately, some were not at Pearl Harbor.

For one class of fighting men this poem has special inspiration. Today it is the flier, even more than the sailor, upon whom rests the special call for watchfulness. And apart from the poem's lesson, I can think of nothing so apt for a flying man to repeat to himself as he takes off to gallant adventure. I know of one flying man who does.

("Drake's Drum" is printed here entire, by permission of the executors of the author, Sir Henry Newbolt.)

Soft Coal Pile Grows, but Is Still Held Inadequate

Acting Director Howard A. Gray of the Office of Solid Fuels Coordinator reported yesterday that America's soft coal pile grew an estimated 5,573,000 tons in May. But he said the amount of fuel in storage still is not enough to give the Nation adequate protection against possible war-time emergencies.

Gray estimated that consumers held 76,409,000 tons of soft coal in storage June 1, compared with a total of 61,836,000 tons on May 1.

Meanwhile, current production rates for both bituminous and anthracite continued above ordinary seasonal levels, with soft coal production estimated at 11,376,000 tons for the week ended June 27, compared with 11,125,000 tons the previous week.

Anthracite production was estimated at 1,238,000 tons for the week of June 27, an increase of 26,000 tons over the preceding week, Gray said.

Secretary of Interior Ickes urged consumers again to continue ordering coal for protective storage and accept delivery whenever it can be supplied.

Democracy

("Among the arrivals in Ireland with the American soldiers is Pvt. Lee Ying Yong."—News items.)

Lee Ying Yong of the U. S. A.—
He's a China boy and he's on his way;
He is off to war to a new Yank song;
"Yankee Doodle Lee Ying Yong."

Lee Ying Yong of the yellow race;
In an army white takes his willing place;
So a rousing cheer, as the glasses clank
To our newest fighter, Ying Yong Yank!

Do you wonder that the Irish stare
At this smiling scrapper over there—
That the colleens gasp in a manner frank
At a Lee Ying Yong who's a real young Yank?

He's a slant-eyed lad from a distant land;
For democracy he will take his stand;
Though a queue once flew from his father's head
For an "Army cut" he now goes instead.

He's a young recruit from an ancient race
With a Yankee look on a Chinese face;
How Confucius would, could he see him now,
Note his present garb and give one long "Wow!"

In the rice fields far from this U. S. A.
Stood the Lee Ying Yongs of the ancient day;
Once we thought of each as the "low Chinee"
Now they strive with us for the victory!

Oh, his forbears dressed in the Chinese style
With their garments big by about a mile;
They were not so much when it came to swank—
But this Yong looks smart as a fighting Yank.

It was fashion once to say "Ah there, Chink!"
At a Chinaman over here, I think;
And to wisecrack, "Hey, is my laundry done?"
But such notions now, well, they're held by none.

Once this Lee Ying Yong was a laundry name
So at least we thought to our dying shame;
Now the Lee Ying Yongs rate a hip hooray
Mid the fighting men of the U. S. A.

So, a toast to you, Private Lee Ying Yong
May you come back safe, and not be too long!
For in recent years we have seen the light
AND WE KNOW DARNED WELL HOW THE CHINESE FIGHT!

Elmer Twitchell says the defeat of the British at Libya may be due partly to shock and surprise at seeing Italian troops moving forward.

A Father's Advice in Wartime

That also is the bunk, man;
To win both wealth and fame today
You have to be a junkman."

An Important Test

By Ernest K. Lindley

Pressure Groups And Living Costs

THERE ARE two specific points of controversy in the fight between the Senate and the House over the Agriculture Department appropriation bill.

LINDLEY

The first is whether Government-held grain can be sold for feed at less than parity prices. To the average citizen who is not on a farm this may not seem important. But it has a direct bearing on the supply and price of meats—especially pork—and dairy and poultry products.

The Commodity Credit Corp. now owns or controls about 350,000,000 bushels of wheat and 60,000,000 bushels of corn. It has been selling this grain below the parity price. The wheat is not needed for food; it is needed as feed. The House insists that there be no more sales below parity.

Department of Agriculture experts say that if the House prevailed, the Commodity Credit Corp. probably could not sell any wheat. At parity it would cost too much for use as feed—and at present wheat is selling on the open market below parity, anyway.

THESE EXPERTS assert that the effect would be either to raise the price of meats and dairy and poultry products from 15 to 20 per cent, or to cut down production. Economists in the Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimate that about one billion dollars would be added to the cost of living if there were no reduction in the production of livestock and poultry. If production were reduced, the total amount added to the cost of living would also be cut—but there would be less to eat.

This, stripped of details, is the picture as it is sketched by qualified authorities. It should be pointed out that the Government has, in effect, promised that the farmers who raise wheat and corn, as well as cotton, tobacco and rice, shall receive the equivalent of parity prices. If the market prices are below parity, the difference will be made up by Government subsidies. At present rice and tobacco are selling above parity prices, and cotton is at parity—so that wheat and corn are the only commodities involved in this question.

PARITY is not the issue, but the House, for reasons which defy analysis, holds its ground. The Senate's attitude toward this bill is somewhat more reasonable. Coming up in the Senate, however, is a bill to compel the Government to make loans against basic agricultural commodities at 100 per cent of parity—instead of at 85 per cent, as is now the rule. These are one-way loans, as they would have the effect of fixing price bottoms at parity. This also would tend to hold down the supply of meat and dairy and poultry products—although this difficulty could be got around if the Government were authorized to sell grain below parity for feed purposes. The loss would fall on the Government and be paid by the taxpayer. But this would merely be a different way of subsidizing the farmer.

The second point in controversy is money to run the Farm Security Administration. The Senate was nearsightedly stingy, but the House was savage. Apart from longer-range considerations, Farm Security's work in increasing the output of small farmers is important to the war effort.

The President at last has struck out at the pressure groups which have cowed the House and so threaten to put a serious crimp in the Government's program for producing more food.

THIS IS AN important test. But it is only one of many important tests which might as well be met now. What is at stake is the orderly and efficient administration of the war effort—which includes sensible management of the internal economy under the unprecedented stresses of the war.

Now, when the whole future of the Nation and the world hang in the balance, the pressure groups and special interests are operating as usual in Washington—and the politicians in Congress are heeding them as usual. Even the Administration hesitates to plunge ahead—to do some of the things it knows are necessary, or at least highly desirable, if the war is to be won and if, at the same time, a serious inflation is to be avoided.

The politicians do not seem to believe that the voters back home put the national security and welfare first. This is a disgraceful assumption. But it can be demolished only by the people themselves. It is up to them to put some starch in their wilted Senators or Representatives—or to get some new ones.

Capital Churches Observe America's Independence With Patriotic Services

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

A CITIZENRY sobered by war's realities yesterday packed churches for the spiritual commemoration of Independence Day.

Numbers of ministers reported record crowds for July services, as the normal midsummer attendance was swelled by throngs of newcomers and men in uniform. The fact that pressure of war work and gas rationing kept many people at home for the weekend also increased attendance, according to some clergy.

That loyalty to God and country go hand in hand was stressed in many sermons by ministers and addresses by service chaplains and other guest speakers at combined religious and patriotic programs.

THE pews of historic Luther Place Memorial Church at Thomas Circle were dotted with the uniforms of the Nation's defenders as the congregation sponsored a "Semper Fidelis" (Always Faithful) service honoring the United States Marine Corps.

Lieut. Col. Frank R. Worthington, U. S. M. C., guest speaker, told 1000 worshipers that the Marines were taking advantage of the opportunity offered for worshiping God in a free country. The Marines realize as well as civilians, he said, that "one can't love country without loving God."

Faith in one's self, God and country was emphasized by the Rev. Dr. Charles B. Foelsch, pastor, in his "Semper Fidelis" sermon.

Marine Paymaster's Sergt. Martin A. McGrory, sr., whose son, Martin A. jr., is a Marine staff sergeant "somewhere in the Pacific," asked Divine guidance for men in the armed forces in a prayer after Dr. Foelsch's sermon. Mrs. Martin A. McGrory, jr., also attended the service.

THE congregation of Foundry Methodist Church, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest, last night sponsored a roll call of its men in the armed forced. Chaplain Charles T. Trexler of the Army Medical Center, spoke on "The True American."

The Rev. Dr. Charles B. Foelsch, pastor, and Lieut. Col. Frank R. Worthington, U. S. M. C., are shown before the Semper Fidelis service yesterday at Luther Place Memorial Church

Earlier in the evening, members of the Foundry Forge youth group held a program for service men, and Marine Chaplain Charles Beatty spoke on "Service to Service Men." Prior to the evening worship program, service men toured the church and educational building, guided by the Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor.

PREACHING on "Christain Patriotism" last night at First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O Streets Northwest, the Rev. Dr. Edward H. Pruden said, in part:

"When certain of the Jews made a request of Jesus in behalf of a Roman centurion they declared, 'He loveth our nation and hath built us a synagogue.' Love of country is not always associated with a keen interest in spiritual things but these Jews in the long ago rightly inferred that one's love for his country can hardly be expressed in a more graphic way than in the support one gives to its spiritual ideals and institutions. 'Happy is that nation whose God is the Lord,' said an ancient seer, and it is inversely true that a nation is greatly to be pitied that ignores and neglects God.

"In these trying days, when so many different ways are being suggested in which we can express our patriotism, let us be reminded that any nation's real security lies in its spiritual resources far more than in amount of material weapons. True goldiness among our Nation's founders made our country great and ungodliness among our contemporary leaders can undermine all that the past has provided. Let us all, therefore, both great and small, leaders and followers alike, exalt our God and support His cause in a day when paganism is being openly championed in some countries."

PREACHING on the theme of "The Heaven-Touched Flag" at Georgetown Lutheran Church, Wisconsin Avenue and Volta Place Northwest, the Rev. Harold E. Beatty declared:

"The Bible is the magna carta for all people. It is not merely a bill of rights for this or that nation. The Bible is the emancipation proclamation for all mankind. This is the testimony of our Lord and Master: 'If ye continue in My words, then are ye My disciples indeed, and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.' Yes, that human Magna Carta, signed by King John and the barons at a meadow called Runnymede, on the Thames near Windsor, is a fruit of our Lord's divine declaration of indepedence.

"Christianity, therefore, is not merely a movement, a system or an organization. The heart, the power of Christianity is a person. 'If the son shall make ou free, ye shall be free indeed.' The Christian freedom enjoyed in America is gloriously symbolized in our Flag.

"How many things have entered into the making of the Star-Spangled Banner! Interwoven with the stars and bars are toil and sweat, tears and blood, life and death. But all this must be in order that the banner of freedom might 'wave over the land of the free and the home of the brave.'

"Wherefore even today, under the horrors and sorrows of war, the Soldier of the Cross rejoices in the victorious faith that he is aiding his Nation in bringing in that day when there will be set up upon the earth the Parliament of Man, the Federation of the World."

AMERICAN and Christian flags were dedicated at services at McKendree Methodist Church, South Dakota and Rhode Island Avenues Northeast. The Rev. Charles F. Phillips, pastor, presided.

Similar emblems were presented at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church's worship services, in recognition of the congregation's team which won the championship of the Methodist Bowling League. Howard Stackhouse, league president, official of Emory Methodist Church and a vice president of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association, made the presentation.

As Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G Street Northwest, held a patriotic service, Chaplain Arnold M. Lewis of the Fort Myer 176th Infantry was guest speaker. National hymns and prayers were heard at the service.

An honor roll containing the names of 16 men having gone from the congregation into the armed forces was presented at services of the North Washington Baptist Church, in Stansbury Hall, Brightwood.

A service shield honoring the congregation's service men was dedicated at Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church, New Hampshire Avenue and Randolph Street Northwest. Representatives of the service men's families placed tiny flags on the shield. The Rev. Dr. C. E. Hawthorne preached on "Serving in Hard Places."

GOD as reflected in nature was stressed in a number of sermons, among them that at Albright Memorial Evangelical Church, Fourth and Rittenhouse Streets Northwest.

Launching a series of nature sermons, the Rev. George Schnabel declared:

"We need the mountain view of life today. We need it for a proper perspective. After months of living on the street level of life, all of us would be the better for a trip to the mountains to be alone with God, away from the radio, the headlines, the sirens, the neon lights, the pushing crowds.

Before attending patriotic services last night at Foundry Methodist Church, a group of service men toured the building. The men view the reredos, the carving of which depicts a group in modern dress clustered about Christ

"No one ever gets a proper perspective of life apart from God. To climb some mountains to reach some vast silence, and where the noise of F Street is left far behind, is a tonic for any soul. There in the silence God can talk to us. He has our undivided attention. There He can direct our thinking and with trees and rocks and glades and vistas, the spirit is quieted, the mind calmed, the whole being lifted.

"Not many are going to the mountains these days. We are going to stay on F Street to be pushed about."

SPEAKING yesterday on the theme of "The Vicious Circle" at Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, Fourth and B Streets Southeast, the Rev. Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich said:

"Hate thrives on hate. Evil draws sustenance from evil. To return evil for evil is the one guarantee of its perpetuation. The world subconsciously is under dominance of the tragic dictum of untruth that good can come of evil. The law of life is eternally hate for hate, frown for frown, smile for smile.

"Man cannot change it. When we forgive we are forgiven. This is the eternal law."

SUMMER community services were held in various sections of the city and suburbs.

Chevy Chase Protestant churches held services on the lawn of All Saints' Episcopal Church. Takoma Park church and civic leaders sponsored vespers in front of the town council building. The Y. M. C. A. and 23 churches joined in services in Lincoln Park, Thirteenth and East Capitol Streets. The Interdenominational Laymen's Association held a program under a tent at Thirteenth and K Streets Southeast. The Washington Catholic Evidence Guild sponsored programs in Franklin and Lincoln Parks and Logan Circle.

Lack of Iron in Diet May Explain Children's Appetite for Mud or Clay, Says Science Survey; Reader Sees Need of Vitamins and Calcium, Too

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In your column of June 29, a mother asked advice concerning her small daughter's "very bad habit of eating small rocks and mud." She says she has "tried every means she can think of, to break the habit," but without success; and that their family doctor has advised her "just to forget about it." To this she adds the significant report that the child "is a little lazy about eating her food; feeding herself only when she has done without two or three meals; or when we have something she especially likes, such as sweets or starches."

I wish to call this mother's attention to the following excerpt from Science Service: "Dirt eating or clay eating may be a sign of diet deficiency, it is revealed by a survey of school children . . . The evidence suggests that dirt eating may be due to a lack of iron in the diet." This would be my interpretation of the underlying reason for the child's behavior. All things point to a deficient diet. Some degree of vitamin hunger is also unquestionably present. In all probability, the child needs more calcium than she is getting, too. I know from experience the anxiety a mother feels when he finds her baby chewing pebbles and to her "foreign objects," including glass. But when dirt eating enters, science is now able to point the way to corrective feeding measures.

Now, for one other suggestion,—at the risk of carrying coals to Newcastle! Harking back to your column of May 23, I wish you had thought of Dr. Thomas Spies, trail-blazer in vitamin therapy, as a source of help for that hapless young wife (and mother of small children), whose nervous depression and mental confusion were worsened by the fact that her husband first brutally abused her and then committed her to a State hospital for treatment. As you perhaps know, Dr. Spies' revolutionary discoveries concerning the relationship between vitamin-rich diet and mental health have been publicized time and again by Readers' Digest in the past two years, and are receiving serious attention from progressive medical men.

I happened to hear Dr. Spies discuss over the radio his success in overcoming a case of violent mental illness with the intravenous use of a certain vitamin dosage. The patient's health was restored in a matter of days. (Incidentally, Miss Haworth, I hope the great public service you are rendering compensates at least partially for the exacting role you play). Sincerely,

MRS. L. E. K.

Respect Child's Rhythm In Guiding Growth

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am interested in the "child behavior" problems discussed in your columns of June 24 and June 29—the first concerning 3-year-old twin boys' refusal to go to sleep when put to bed; and the second concerning a two-and-one-half year old girl's wayward feeding habits. On the basis of my past experience as a nursery school teacher, I may be able to add something to your thoughtful suggestions.

Regarding the twins' problem, I was particularly struck by the fact that although their mother puts them to bed promptly at 1 p. m. for their afternoon nap, they seldom fall asleep until 2:30 p. m. This may mean that they aren't ready for sleep when she puts them to bed—either because they get plenty of sleep at night, as a result of retiring early; or because their particular rhythm is different from that of the next-door neighbor's child, who is always sleepy just after lunch.

It is well to adapt a schedule to the child's natural inclinations. This often saves exhausting worry, struggle and emotional strain between mother and child,—thus making for a smoother, happier relationship in all other phases of activity. It may be that a longer play period in the morning, a slightly later lunch and a short play period after lunch would be better suited to the twins' lively temperament than the schedule the mother is trying to enforce. The change may be inconvenient for her at first, but she ought to give it a trial. And if it works, she will find it leaves her fresher at the end of the day.

Now, about the little girl's "lazy" refusal to feed herself: Here again, the child's natural growth rhythm is probably a factor. Many children feed themselves consistently and well before they are two years of age; but others are slow to develop agile motor coordination. The child who is busy learning to talk, for instance, and grappling with sentences is often laggard in physical performance. It is beyond his capacity to give the necessary amount of attention simultaneously to both phases of his development.

Thus, forcing the child to feed herself now, when she is not quite ready for the task,—even though she has shown she has the ability to do it for limited periods,—may very easily lay the foundations of a pernicious "feeding problem," the bane of many mothers' existence. If she were given an extra spoon with which to help herself, while her nurse or mother helped her along, she probably would come to the place, before long, where she would refuse assistance.

Dr. Myrtle McGraw has done some interesting work at Yale University on the growth rhythms of children, and has incorporated her findings in a book, which makes helpful reading for all young mothers. In my opinion, the number of so-called "problem children" would drop sharply, if more mothers took account of their children's natural and spontaneous pace of development, when guiding their growth—instead of trying, mistakenly, to make the child conform to some standardized notion of what he should do and be, at a given age.

Your First Black Dress

Your new dress for fall will have that ultra smart, narrow silhouette, and it is likely to be of satin. Above, it is seen in the peg-top skirt version designed by Adele Simpson in pure silk satin. The cleverly draped skirt, inverted pleats for neckline interest, superb cut of shoulder and detail of self-buttons all bespeak inimitable chic. It is the drapery of your frock and the figure you cut that will matter this fall. Gone is fussy femininity and details that mean just so many more dry cleanings. How to Economize

(Following is an interview with Mrs. Montclair St. Vitus, homemaker, career woman, civic leader, art and culture patron, esthete, humanitarian, collector, antique lover, etc., on how to pay the income tax.)

Q—As a noted exponent of thrift, Mrs. St. Vitus, will you please explain how the average housewife can meet the high cost of living?

A—Simply by making $1 do the work of $10. A penny saved is a penny earned.

Q—Just what are you doing to save the pennies, Mrs. St. Vitus?

A—For one thing I am going without stockings. I just stop by the beauty shop for a leg make-up whenever I am going out.

Q—But doesn't that take time?

A—No, I never waste a golden moment. While I am having my legs made up and getting my pedicure, I do my feather work.

Q—Your feather work?

A—Yes, I am collecting feathers from the barnyards of my friends and sewing them together to make an evening dress. In that way I shall save the price of a new winter formal.

Q—How else are you economizing Mrs. St. Vitus?

A—I am doing my own sewing. I made myself a little basic dress the other day.

Q—Not in one day?

A—Certainly! Any woman can make herself a dress in one day—if she concentrates.

Q—Just how did you concentrate Mrs. St. Vitus?

A—It was quite simple. I just shut the door of my room and wouldn't be disturbed.

Q—But how did you manage your household?

A—That was quite simple also. I turned the day's menus completely over to the cook. The maid answered the telephone and doorbell and took my messages. My luncheon was brought in on a tray. I sent the houseman out for a few little things that I needed such as fastenings.

Q—Weren't you completely exhausted by the task?

A—Yes, but I had my masseuse drop by and give me a treatment.

Q—And you had saved the cost of a dress?

A—Yes, and it will be quite a smart dress—when I once get downtown and find some stunning accessories.

Q—What other hints do you have for housewives, Mrs. St. Vitus?

A—If you take care of the pennies, the dollars will take care of themselves.

Q—Just what do you mean?

A—Well, I always save electricity by having the demi-tasse served by candlelight. I have laid in some perfectly lovely old silver candlesticks for that purpose.

Q—Any other economy hints?

A—Yes, I am having my cook save the ends of burnt matches. I shall have my houseman use them as kindling wood in the fireplaces this fall, and we won't have to light the furnace so early.

Q—The idea then is to get back to pioneer living as far as possible.

A—That's it exactly! I am even going to make soap out of discarded bacon grease—or rather have my cook make it. But the economy measure of which I am proudest is the filing system I have worked out for paper bags.

Q—Won't you tell about it?

A—I shall be glad to as I think it will help every other housewife. You see I had saved so many paper bags that they were filling the house and my cook had threatened to quit. So I called in a secretary and we worked out a system whereby the bags will all be filed in steel cabinets in the basement according to size, and a complete card index kept of them. Then whenever a certain size of paper sack is needed we can consult our index, go to our files and get it.

Q—Have you any final admonition to the housewife?

A—Just one thing! Don't waste any stale bread. I have a marvelous recipe for left-over bread called Economy Bread Crumb Casserole. All you need is a cupful of stale bread crumbs to which you add two cupfuls of flaked lobster, a cup of white wine, a dozen eggs—well beaten—

Q—Just a minute, Mrs. St. Vitus! Are the whites and yolks of the eggs separated?

A—I'm not sure about that. You'll have to consult my cook. Anyway I have to rush on now to take my tallyho lesson?

Q—Is that a measure of economy?

A—Yes indeed! I'm learning to drive a four-horse tallyho and I expect to make perfectly marvelous savings on gasoline.

Lieutenant's Delight an A. W. V. S. Dessert Special

THE lieutenant was very young—his epaulets were likewise—and he was also ravenously hungry. The heaping tray he had culled in passing along the lunch bar at A. W. V. S. headquarters at 2170 Florida Avenue Northwest amply testified to that.

Behind the array of desserts stood Mrs. Emory Brenneman, who wears a smile that makes the khaki-clad overlook the fact that the person just ahead in line has helped himself to the last serving of his favorite food.

"No more tarts?" the officer asked. Suspicions confirmed by hostess, he inquired, "What's that?" with his finger stabbed in the general direction of a flat baking dish completely surrounded by delectable aromas.

"That," answered Mrs. Brenneman, "is a grand dessert called graham cracker pudding—made of cracker crumbs, apple sauce and nuts—and a few more ingredients."

Not entirely certain it was "so grand," yet wanting to satisfy his sweet tooth, the lieutenant walked away with the pudding on his tray. He must be of the school who tries dessert first, for he was back almost immediately asking, "Any rule against seconds?"

Assured that he could have "seconds" and even "thirds," the officer did just that. And since that day this royal pudding has been rechristened, "Lieutenant's Delight" and served by popular request several times weekly. The recipe follows:

Lieutenant's Delight

To 1½ cups of graham crackers rolled to fine crumbs, add ¼ pound melted butter, ½ cup chopped nut meats—almonds are very good—¼ cup sugar and 2 tablespoons molasses. Put two-thirds mixture into bottom of flat baking dish. Mix 1 pint apple sauce with 1 teaspoon orange rind and pour over cracker mixture. Bake for 30 minutes in moderate oven, 350 degrees. Serve cold. Cream, whipped or not, as preferred, may be used as garnish.

P. S.: The lieutenant took the whipped cream to top his pudding.

Soft Goods for Decorating Still Plentiful; 'Bomber' Cloth Is New

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THIS is going to be a soft year, decoratively speaking—by which we mean that what redecorating is done will mostly have to be achieved with fabrics and other soft goods. Even this category of merchandise, so adaptable for ingenious contriving, will not be abundantly available and it won't escape necessary curtailment by the Government. But at least it is expected to be more available than heavy, hard merchandise.

We just took a turn around the wholesale fabric market the other day to look at the designs being made to conform with the Government regulations. Actually up to this writing the regulations aren't final . . . they came in the nature of a notice to the manufacturers warning them to be prepared for a limitation of pattern to 40 per cent design and 60 percent background.

Lovely Patterns Available

The manufacturers went ahead on this warning and changed their new lines to conform to this proportion. Actually within such limits, lovely patterns are still possible . . . so that to the consumer the change will hardly be noticed. The new designs do not cover up the surface as much as did the old ones, but the fresh splashy big scale effects are still possible.

The point of this regulation was to save dye, but one leading manufacturer confided to us that this does not actually save dye. Because thus far there has been no limitation of the number of colors that could be used in any one pattern. For instance, they can still make a design that uses eight or nine different colors, each requiring a separate copper roller and a separate tank of dye. She pointed out that limitation to five or six colors for each design would achieve more dye saving than limitation of area coverage . . . for this would save both dye and copper.

Blue and Gold

An interesting new fabric is called bomber cloth. It is a supple staunch fabric with great tensile strength. It is manufactured by a mill that has been working on Government orders and had to perfect a fabric to use as slings for bomb racks. The result was also found to be very good for decorative fabrics and so is also being made in attractive patterns.

For the first time in many seasons blue and gold combinations are best sellers. Usually used almost exclusively by decorators, these tones are now in great demand everywhere. All colors tend to be clearer and fresher this year—and a natural reaction from the grim outlook otherwise.

There is also a trend toward more document prints, that is, designs taken from old traditional sources, instead of spectacular new designs. This is explained partly by the anticipation of limitation on the number of new patterns . . . partly by the fact that many designers are in the Army

Calisthenics Eases Duty of Daily Schedule

By Ida Jean Kain

A SET OF calisthenics is a bore—and anyone who tries to tell you any different is a bore, too. But there's no denying it can work miracles. Taken the right way, it whittles the waist, smooths those doorknobs off the hips, and tones you up and slims you down all in one.

Of course, you are not going to find time for exercise—you have to make it. So why not put your exercise on a schedule, like the other things you don't do for fun but get done just the same?

We'll say you are a housewife and always try to be finished with the dishes by 9 o'clock in the morning. Right after that might be a very good time for you to take your exercise. Or, you may be an office worker and get away around 5 in the afternoon. Then make it your personal business to go to a good gymnasium two nights a week. And pay for your courses in advance so you will go regularly.

Scheme of Living

Those are only suggestions. You have to make the arrangements that fit into your scheme of living. But make them, and stick to your schedule. Gradually your reluctance to exercise will wear off. At about the same rate, you will begin to see results—and they will make you considerably more enthusiastic.

There are experts who contend that the exhilaration that goes with a game makes it better than any routine exercise. But you're too much inclined to leave the games to chance and to fall into a routine of inactivity. Besides, once your figure has gone to pot, you can't hope to get it back with croquet, golf or tennis. A specific set of twists, turns, leg swings and sideward bends is what it takes to put you back in shape—and it is the most dependable way of keeping in shape.

Exercise With Music

You can usually find time for anything you enjoy doing even a little. I find that taking exercise to music makes it much more fun. I stretch to a tune like "Play, Gypsy," bump to the "Jersey Bounce," swing to "The Band Played On," and relax to the finish with "Sleepy Lagoon."

I take most of these exercises on the floor and keep going only as long as I feel like it. Sometimes I work hard for the first two-thirds of the record, then quit and listen to the music for the last third. This laternates exercise with rest in just about the right proportion and afterwards I feel refreshed. The routine is so pleasant I think it may be habit forming. Why not try it? You'll be surprised how quickly your exercise time goes.

Younger Set Decides "It's the Thing" To Work—And Hard—During Wartime

By Peggy Preston

"THE BUSIEST CITY in the world" is now converting even its most beauteous young debs into wage slaves. A look at the roll call of half a dozen or more Government agencies will reveal that the gay, party-filled life of yesterday's debutante is as outmoded as last year's patch pocket and swing skirt. The girls are going to work these days . . . and they're loving it.

Time was, when a Washington 19-year-old had more amusing ways to occupy her time. The round of dinners, dances, dates and committee work that began with her coming out party always continued well into the summer when she was off with her family to some equally exciting playground in the mountains or on the shore.

The whirl of parties continues apace in Our Town, but members of the younger set for the most part have elected to turn their thoughts to more serious matters. Whether in answer to the need for a change from their traditional manner of living or whether the gravity of the times has brought on a desire among the young women for service to their country, the action is most certainly commendable and worthy of note.

'Peter' Norris Is WPB Aide

Over at WPB the pretty blond head of Mary Teresa Norris, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris may be counted among the hundreds of secretaries. Known to her friends as "Peter," the youthful Miss Norris has been hard at work for some time past and her sister Marion Norris is looking for a job on the side while she completes a secretarial course.

Another WPB secretary is Betty Burton, who made her debut several seasons ago at a party given by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence F. Burton. A girl with a real career in mind is Achsah Dorsey, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Benjamin H. Dorsey, a debutante of a few years past who has tried her hand at many jobs and finds her present one a pleasant stepping stone. She is working in the Classified Ads department of The Washington Post so don't be surprised to hear Achsah's dulcet voice answering your query some day for a "Furnished Apartment for Rent."

Eileen Erwin, the pretty brunette daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin has completed her freshman year at Bryn Mawr and has joined the ranks of secretarial students in town with an eye to getting a job. Elene Essary, who made her debut last Thanksgiving at Blair House, is likewise taking a secretarial job with an eye to snaring a job in the Government. She has just finished her freshman year at Sweet Briar, Virginia's most select college for girls.

Sue Oulahan, pert member of the current deb set, is the envy of many a friend for she is a copy girl of a local paper and is looking forward to a more important job in the near future. Sue was graduated from Madeira a few weeks ago.

Colonel's Daughter Is Saleswoman

Trying her hand at department store selling is Cynette Allen, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Henry Allen. However, this young deb of last winter still finds time to ride her favorite mount, Stardust, over the paths at Fort Myer before hying off to her job in town each morning.

Virginia Pennington, who has recently returned from Mare Island, Calif., where she was the guest of Capt. and Mrs. Charles Holman, is back in town and is literally haunting Government agencies in the hopes of getting in the swing of things. Still another pretty Washington miss who is brushing up on her ps and qs in shorthand and typewriting is Patricia Prochnik, who last summer and winter took a fling at night club singing. Although Mary Lord Andrews, daughter of Mrs. Atherton McCondray, has not taken on a paying job she is putting in her days in a yet more worthy cause and may be found for six hours each day in her starched costume of the Nurses Aide Corps.

Off for New York early this week will be Mlle. Madeline Jacquin, daughter of the Air Attache of the French Embassy, Col. Paul Jacquin, who plans an extensive secretarial course for this summer and fall. She was graduated from Holton-Arms and has definite ideas on the subject of a career.

And so the list could go on and on. One thing seems assured however . . . the glamour girl type of debutante is definitely "out" for the duration.

Miss Teeter Is Bride of Ensign Randall

In a 4 o'clock ceremony yesterday at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church Miss Dulcie Genevieve Teeter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earle Everett Teeter, became the bride of Ensign Robert H. Randall, jr., U. S. N. R. Dr. John W. Rustin read the marriage vows before an altar banked with white gladioli and palms.

Mr. Teeter gave his daughter in marriage. Her bridal ensemble was of white embroidered organza, a finger-tip veil falling from a coronet of fresh flowers and she carried a bouquet of white summer blossoms.

Maid of honor was Miss Marjorie V. Wilkins and the bridesmaids were Miss Beryl Conklin, Miss Alice Waldron, Miss Barbara Hamblin and Miss Pattie Moore. Flower girls were Virginia Teeter and Patty Lou Head. All carried old-fashioned nosegays of white roses, larkspur and daisies. William E. Randall was his brother's best man and ushers included R. Dana Wallace, Lieut. (J. G.) Bert M. Randall and George Cowie.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents where her mother received guests wearing pale rose chiffon with a corsage of blue delphinium. Mrs. Randall, sr., was costumed in rose chiffon and lace with a similar corsage.

The couple departed later for a wedding trip along the New England coast and will make their home at Woods Hole on Cape Cod. For her traveling costume the bride chose a pale blue linen suit with white accessories. She attended George Washington University, as did the bridegroom.

J. V. Castiglia And Bride Now On Honeymoon

Currently on a brief wedding trip are Mr. and Mrs. James Vincent Castiglia after which they will go to Fort Bliss, Tex., where the bridegroom will be stationed with the U. S. Army.

Before their marriage on Friday, July 3, the bride was Miss Catherine Marie Kane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Kane of this city. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Castiglia of Passaic, N. J. The ceremony took place is St. Ann's Catholic Church with the Rev. Russell A. Phelan officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was costumed in a dressmaker suit of dusty rose crepe and a small hat of pink and blue flowers trimmed with a veil. She carried a prayer book and a shower bouquet of baby orchids. Mrs. Thomas C. Gray, the matron or honor was the only attendant and Peter Castiglia acted as his brother's best man.

The bride is a graduate of St. Mary of the Woods College in Indiana, and the bridegroom is a graduate of Georgetown University, where he was a member of the football squad.

Red Cross Canteen To Open July 11

A gay red, white and blue color scheme will be a feature of the new Red Cross Canteen when it opens officially on July 11. Located on the lower floor of the District Chapter House at 1730 E Street, the canteen has been completely redecorated, modernized and enlarged in the past few months in keeping with the vastly expanded program of service being carried out by the local Red Cross.

Metal tables and chairs have been secured for outdoor serving in the gardens and new and convenient kitchen and storeroom facilities have been added. One of the interesting features of the room will be the new wall panels contributed by the Washington Guild of Artists, led by Olin Dows, noted artist who has recently completed the murals for the Hyde Park Postoffice. All furniture and equipment has been given by individuals and organizations interested in the canteen project.

Mrs. Clayton Trowbridge, chairman of Canteen Corps, has named Mrs. Carrere Barbour and Mrs. Clayton DuBosque as cochairmen of the new District Canteen and a large corps of canteen volunteers is being organized.

Serving on the committee are Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mrs. Anson Gardner, Mrs. Shreeve Badger, Mrs. Burrell Huffman, Mrs. Edward T. Wailes, Mrs. J. D. Waters and Mrs. F. Eberhart Haynes. Mrs. Theodore Leary, District nutritionist, will be in charge of the menus, assisted by Miss Barbara Martin.

Gala Party of Week-End Given By Mr., Mrs. Morris Cafritz

Outstanding party on the weekend calendar was the "Come-for-a-swim, and-stay-for-supper-and-dancing" fete at which Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz entertained on Saturday from 4 p. m. until midnight. Gathering in a large company of friends, the host and hostess proved beyond question that the best way to have a good time on the Fourth of July is to stay in Washington. Guests, arriving at the appointed hour, had time for a swim in one of the prettiest private pools in the Capital, and a suntan later on the grassy surrounding slopes.

Receiving informally, either on the terrace of her magnificent modernistic home, Mrs. Cafritz invited guests to "go right on down to the pool." There Mr. Cafritz greeted them and it was there that everybody lingered until dusk, when a picnic supper was served on the hill. Steaks, hamburgers, and hot dogs," steaming from an outdoor grill, and all manner of garnishes and salads were piled high on plates carried by the guests to the tables, which were set up on the lawn.

Later, when music from the terrace called guests in that direction, dancing became the chief order of entertainment. By that time, many of the feminine guests, who had arrived at the party in sports clothes, had changed into evening frocks, and a number of other guests, also in evening attire, had joined the original company. Blue lights, outlining the terrace, added a special note of glamour to the lovely setting, and the party continued at its merry pace for several hours longer.

Among those present were a number from the Diplomatic Corps who joined in the fun in celebration of America's Independence day. The Minister of Portugal and Mme. Bianchi were there; also, the Indian Agent General and Lady Bajpai, and their daughters; Lieut. Peter Otway-Smithers and Mr. and Mrs. Nevil Godwin, of the British Embassy; John McCarthy, son of the Canadian Minister and Mrs. Leighton McCarthy, and Mrs. John McCarthy, and Miss Cristina Michels, daughter of the Chilean Ambassador.

Still other guests were Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, accompanied by the latter's brother, Clyde Webster; Senator Arthur Capper, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Albert Cox, M. and Mme. Camille Chautemps, Miss Mary Howard of Hollywood fame, who was accompanied by Mead Patrick; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Holland Duell, Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hwija, Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Lothrop Stoddard, James H. R. Cromwell, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, who had with them Maj. and Mrs. Jock Lawrence; Baron and Baroness Stackelberg, Wadsworth Wood and his sister Miss Martha Wood; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Walmsley, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hatch, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Railey, Miss Helen Kravadze, Countess Cassini, Gladstone Williams, and several others.

Thomasons Return From Wedding Trip

Now making their home at 1113 Massachusetts Avenue are Mr. Mr. and Mrs. Eubert Glenn Thomason who returned recently from a brief wedding trip.

The bride is the former Miss Mary Ruth Hunter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Hunter of La Grange, Ga., and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Thomason of Salisbury, N. C. They were united in marriage at 4 o'clock on June 28 at the Petworth Methodist Church, which was decorated with palms and baskets of white summer flowers. The Rev. Frank Steelman read the service.

Mrs. C. R. Wire Honors Parents At Large Fete

Several members of the Cabinet and of Congress and a number of other high officials and residents of the older social circles of Washington and their wives were the guests of Mrs. Charles Raymond Wire yesterday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock in her Bethesda home in Bradley Boulevard, at a reception, honoring her parents, former Representative and Mrs. Quinn Williams of San Angelo, Tex.

Mr. and Mrs. Wire, Mr. and Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Lucile Andrews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Williams, received in the living room, which was decorated in lovely arrangements of white flowers. Mrs. Williams wore a white sheer gown of mousseline de soie, over black silk net, full skirt, with broad bands of black lace insertion, and full sleeves caught in the band at the wrist, and a corsage of orchids. Mrs. Wire's gown was a full bouffant model of white mousseline de soie, she also wearing a corsage of white orchids. Mrs. Andrews' gown was sheer black lace, full skirt and short sleeves, and her corsage was of red rosebuds.

Mrs. George E. Muth and Mrs. Preston E. Wire presided over the punch bowls of fruit and champagne punch at each end of the long table, which had a large oval centerpiece of white flowers and set in the garden. Mrs. Earl J. Wilson and Miss Juanita Williams also assisted at serving.

White was the keynote of the party. The green lawn was dotted with large white umbrellas and white tables and garden furniture gave a most pleasing and cool setting for the large group of guests.

Emiley Mitchell Guest of Honor At Garden Party

High light of a week-long schedule of prenuptial fetes in honor of Miss Emiley Floyd Mitchell and her fiance, Charles Francis Lamborn, was the garden party yesterday in Bethesda given by her sister Mrs. John Jacob Garber and her sister-in-law Mrs. Edwin Senter Mitchell.

Upward of seventy-five guests attended the 5 to 7 event that was held at the home of Mrs. Mitchell. The dining room, where tea was served and the verandas were decorated with baskets of white gladioli while the tea table was centered with a large white and bold cake. The bride-elect, whose marriage will take place July 11 at Mount Ranier Place Church, was attired in an afternoon frock of white organza appliqued with vari-colored flowered patterns and her ccorage was of talisman roses and delphinium.

Assistants at the tea were the bride-elect's mother Mrs. Rossel Edward Mitchell, Mrs. Charles Carrington Lamborn, mother of the prospective bridegroom, Mrs. Frederick Haag, jr., and Miss Mary Bakshian.

Miss Mitchell and her fiance were honor guests at a dinner given Saturday night by Maj. and Mrs. Merillat Moses for members of the wedding party.

Luckadoo–Ford Rites Take Place in Indianapolis

Couple To Make Home Here After Wedding Trip

The Meridian Heights Presbyterian Church in Indianapolis, Ind., was the scene yesterday of the marriage of Miss Gertrude Elizabeth Ford of Washington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Scott Moore Ford of Indianapolis, to Lieut. (j. g.) James Lawrence Luckadoo, U. S. Navy, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. V. Luckadoo, of Chattanoga, Tenn.

Dr. Thomas R. White, assisted by Dr. Sidney B. Harry, read the services at 3:30 and a reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory faille made with bow insets of lace on the long sleeves and full skirt, which fell to a circular train. Her veil of illusion was caught with a coronet of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of bride's roses.

Mr. Robert Ford, the matron of honor, wore a romance blue lace and marquisette frock with lace peplum and a bonnet of matching marquisette. She carried yellow roses and forget-me-nots. Maid of honor was the bridegroom's sister, Miss Nancy Luckadoo, attired in duckling yellow marquisette and lace and her flowers

How Chinese Eluded Jap Trap in Burma

By the United Press

Chungking, July 5.—The story of the escape of several thousand Chinese troops, cut off in Central Burma, to Chinese lines along the Salween River in Yunnan Province after a month-long march through violent monsoons was revealed here today by a British medical officer.

Still full of fight after their hazardous journey through almost impassable jungle, the Chinese defenders of Burma have joined with the main body of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's troops facing the Japanese across the rain-swollen Salween.

Fighting currently is at a standstill, said the British worker, who has been trucking medical supplies to the Chinese in the war-scarred Burma Road area, because the Salween is now uncrossable.

The delay has given the Chinese a breathing spell and they have strengthened their Yunnan defenses.

The Englishman, member of the Friends ambulance unit, reported Japanese aerial attacks had wrecked most of the hospitals and dressing stations in the entire Salween area but that the Chinese had reestablished order along the Burma Road "where confusion formerly reigned."

The provincial hospital in Yunnan and the Southeast National Health Administration Hospital at Paoshan were the most pathetic sights, the Englishman said.

"Littered debris of looters, bombing and bomb victims and wanton destruction of medicines and medical supplies was a heart-breaking sight," he added.

No medical facilities now exist in the area, he said, except for one army dressing station near the front.

Efforts to stem a cholera epidemic, which has broken out among refugees in Hsiakwan, were "partly successful," he reported, although the death rate was high because most refugees were "pitifully fatigued and in starving condition."

A Chinese surgeon at Army Hospital in Yungping, who was with the Chinese armies in their retreat from Burma, was quoted by the British medical worker as saying the condition of the Chinese central armies was "exceedingly healthful except for food, which is difficult to obtain."

Nelson Reported Planning to Return Lyttelton's Visit

New York, July 5 (AP).—The New York Times says that Donald Nelson, director of the War Production Board, will go to Britain next month to confer with Oliver Lyttelton, British minister of production, on the coordination of Anglo-American war production.

The main purpose of Nelson's trip, the Times reports, will be to acquire a personal knowledge of Britain's production machinery and to continue the converations which were started last month during Lyttelton's visit to this country.

Tydings Defends Government From Criticism for 'Reverses'

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, July 5.—Maryland's Senator Millard E. Tydings said today that it would be "unfair to hold governmental officials responsible, unless they meddle or are negligent, for the hazards and mistakes of the battlefield when these public officials have otherwise performed their full duty."

In a speech broadcast over Station WBAL, in which he outlined the events and possible consequences of Britain's unpredicted Libyan defeat, Tydings said the Prime Minister Churchill and the British government appeared to have made every effort "to make the British forces in Africa superior to those of the enemy.

"Superior in Air"

"This, it appears, was the case in most categories of weapons and certainly in the air," he asserted.

"Ministers, statesmen and politicians," Tydings continued, "cannot actually fight the battle on the battlefield. It is the duty of responsible governmental officials to make sure the Army is abundantly supplied and in sufficient force to have the advantage over the enemy.

"It would be unfair to hold governmental officials responsible, unless they meddle or are negligent, for the hazards and mistakes of the battlefield, when these public officials have otherwise performed their duty.

"Even then the side which is superior in equipment and even in generalship may fall the victim of misfortune or accident. Battles are not won on a 'two-plus-two-equals-four' basis. They cannot be reduced to such exactness."

The Senator said Churchill met the issue of the North African misfortune with candor in his speech to the British Parliament and added that it was "gratifying to know that as far as the government was concerned it had given to the British forces in Libya and Egypt equipment, supplies and men enough to have made it appear probable that the enemy could not invade Egypt proper."

Chile Hears 2 Reports Subs Are Off Coast

By the United Press

Santiago, Chile, July 5.—Possibility that Axis submarines are lurking off South America's West Coast preparatory to launching unrestricted submarine warfare on Pacific Coast shipping was seen today as the Chilean ministry of the navy and the Pan American Grace Airways investigated reports that submarines were sighted off Chile's northern ports.

Navy ministry spokesmen were unable to confirm or deny the report that the captain of the Chilean collier Don Ricardo on Friday sighted a submarine about 5 miles off Punta Tetas near Antofogasta.

The Pan American Grace Airways was investigating another report that Friday afternoon the pilots of a northbound Panagra plane saw an explosion alongside a ship about 5 miles off the copper port of Chanaral. The report said that the ship bust into flames after the blast.

Later, officials of the Panagra office in Santiago said there was no truth to reports that any of their pilots had seen an explosion or a burning ship.

They admitted, however, that one of their pilots saw what he thought was a submarine and a mother ship.

The Chilean ministry of defense revealed that upon receipt of the report that a submarine was sighted off Antofogasta, two destroyers and three planes were dispatched to investigate. Further details were not available from Chilean government agencies.

Permits Required To Move Export Goods to Ports

The Government announced yesterday that beginning August 15 large shipments of goods intended for export to other American Republics cannot be moved to United States ports without a permit.

The action, apparently intended to augment methods for preventing congestion of export goods at harbors, was announced jointly by the State Department, Board of Economic Warfare, War Shipping Administration and Office of Defense Transportation.

The order applies to shipments weighing 2240 tons or more of dry cargo, not covering tank steamer shipments. Applications for shipping space must be filed with the Board of Economic Warfare. Such applications will be considered only when the goods are ready for shipment or can be moved from the factory or warehouse within three weeks after application.

Offender Hangs Himself in Cell

An 18-year-old Negro hanged himself in a cell at the Eleventh Precinct Police Station last night shortly after his arrest on a charge of disorderly conduct.

The youth, Oscar Charles Mitchell, of 908 Forty-fourth Street Northeast, was found suspended from a horizonal bar by his shirt, which had been fashioned into a noose. The discovery was made by Sergt. G. P. Waite and Pvt. E. T. Hinsley as they made a routine inspection.

The coroner's office certified the death as suicide.

THE demands of war on the telephone system in and around Washington can only be met by using every trained operator and all available telephone facilities to handle today's volume of calls. It is important, therefore, that our "Information" service be limited to supplying numbers which can not be found in the directory.

Our records show that more than half of the calls to "Information" are unnecessary. They are requests for numbers which are listed in the telephone directory. This is a preventable waste of telephone time and telephone facilities. May we have your cooperation?

HOUDRY HAS IT!

The Houdry Process Corporation has contributed importantly to America's war effort. Without the principle of catalytic cracking for producing gasoline, America's requirements for 100-octane aviation gasoline could not have been met.* Houdry was the first commercial process utilizing catalytic cracking. A new and simplified application of the same process is ready for the making of synthetic rubber.

The Key to synthetic rubber is

BUTADIENE

It is the main ingredient of the best synthetic rubber. The Houdry Process will produce it in greater quantity, in a shorter time, saving millions of dollars over any other petroleum process!

The Federal Diary

Ex-Congress Members Can Still Get Benefits

That new retirement act that became effective on July 1 and which caused such a ruckus because it originally covered members of Congress still stands to benefit them. A member of Congress who is defeated for reelection can get himself a Government job and the years he spent in Congress will count toward his retirement. For example, former Senator Henry F. Ashurst of Arizona spent about 30 years in the Senate. Now he's an official of the Justice Department. His service in the Senate will count toward his retirement. The same is true of Maury Maverick, Addison Smith and other former Congressmen now in the executive branch.

But why pick on the members of Congress? In the departments you've probably noticed elderly former employes being brought back on the job, even people that have been retired. The new liberalized retirement law gives them a chance to get a higher pension by working only a month or so. George Carter, former public printer, is now working in the Senate. Former Secret Service Chief Moran is back at Treasury. Both can work awhile and retire, Moran on a higher annuity and Carter on some sort of a pension since he wasn't drawing one before. However, whether it be a former Congressman or department official, contributions covering all past service must be paid into the retirement fund.

Another Pay Raise Plan

Another compromise pay raise plan is being debated. It proposes that time and a half be paid to all employes earning $2900 and under. However, employes paid over $2900 would be paid overtime based on just that amount no matter whether they were paid $3500 to $7000. A number of private Washington institutions have adopted similar plans to offset higher living costs. The proposal provides for a minimum 44-hour work week which would mean that per annum employes paid $2900 and under would be guaranteed at least an 11 per cent wage increase. Employes who don't work on a per annum basis would be given a straight 10 per cent bonus.

Civil Aeronautics Administration won't hire any more lady pilots to instruct would-be aviators. It has 42 now but the Army doesn't like them . . . The Office of the Petroleum Coordinator will hire 390 new employes. It won't hire dollar-a-year men. The agency pays its employes an average salary of $3000, one of the highest, if not the highest, in the Federal service . . . Twenty-eight different Federal agencies have their fingers on the oil industry. No wonder a coordinating agency is needed . . . A report to Congress is expected to be made this week on the 4000-odd employes on the Dies list.

Nelson Rockefeller told the House Appropriations Committee that he had contracted to hire David Saposs for one year at a $6500 salary. Saposs is studying labor in South American republics. He was the victim of persecution when he was at the labor board . . . The Senate this week is expected to pass the custodial pay raise bill and the bill that would permit Federal workers to accumulate up to 90 days of annual leave . . . Additional officers from the Coast and Geodetic Survey have been transferred to the War and Navy departments . . . Congress has appropriated $132,500 to bury Japanese and other enemy aliens who are moved inland by the War Relocation Authority. The agency estimates 120 will die a month and that it'll cost $75 for each burial. Most Japs prefer to have their bodies cremated.

Tough One for Cogswell

District Rent Chief Robert F. Cogswell had a tough one to decide the other day. Six Government girls shared a bathtub but one of them spent from 45 minutes to an hour each day in the tub. To speed up her bathing, the five other girls took off the bathroom door. The easy-going bather then protested to Cogswell that her rent should be lowered because the "service" rendered had declined . . . Cogswell solved the problem by getting the five girls to agree to put back the bathroom door and the sixth finally agreed to take 15-minute baths.

PUC Hopeful Of Settlement In Cab Row

Differences Can Be Composed, Flanagan Asserts; Strike Vote Today and Tomorrow

Oil poured on the waters of Washington's muddled taxicab situation last night appeared to have forestalled, at least temporarily, the possibility of any immediate strike by drivers, and to have laid the foundation for a friendly and cooperative approach to the admittedly tough problems involved.

The first harbinger of peace came yesterday morning in the form of a statement issued over the signature of James H. Flanagan, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, who declared that the public and drivers alike are "entitled to an early release from the state of confusion which now exists" and added:

". . . I am convinced that there are no irreconcilable differences of opinion."

"Speedy and Lawful Solution"

He said, also, that "the one and only desire of the Commission is to proceed on an amicable and cooperative basis to a speedy and lawful solution of the existing problem."

The statement was issued solely on the initiative of Commissioner Flanagan, but Chairman Gregory Hankin indorsed the view it expressed and said it could be taken, verbatim, as an expression from the entire Commission.

When the statement was read to Edward A. Glenn, president of United Taxicab Drivers, Inc., he expressed his appreciation of Flanagan's views and declared "if they represent those of the Commission we should have no difficulty in arriving at a solution at an early date."

He asserted, emphatically, that "there will be no strike until such time as I am satisfied we cannot secure a settlement by negotiation."

Strike Vote Begins Today

The strike vote, scheduled today and tomorrow at 808 I Street Northwest, will proceed, however, Glenn said, "so that the wishes of the men shall be known to the officers who represent them."

There will be three ballots for the drivers to vote upon. One will ask whether the driver wants the new P. U. C. zone system, with a 30-40-60-80-cent basic zone rate and 21 subzones, or the union-proposed 30-50-70-90-cent rates with the old zone boundaries. On a second ballot, drivers will say whether they want Hankin retained in office, and on the third they will record whether they wish to employ the "vacation" method of obtaining their ends.

What Hankin described as "a prehearing conference" will be held Wednesday by the P. U. C. with representatives of the taxicab industry to decide what steps shall be taken in the current situation. Scheduled as a closed session, Glenn said yesterday he would insist that representatives of the press be admitted so that the public might be kept informed of developments.

Flanagan's statement said that both the PUC and the drivers had a dual responsibility of determining at an early date whether the new "zones and rates are fair and equitable, or whether certain changes should be made in fairness to both the public and the drivers."

The Commissioner expressed confidence that the taxicab industry was aware of its obligations, declaring:

"I desire to state definitely that the commission is determined that the zones and rates to be in effect shall be fair to both the public and the drivers; that they shall be arrived at in a lawful manner, and that the commission will take no action which will afford even the slightest pretext for an interruption of the cab service of the District of Columbia."

District Bridge Trio Second At Annapolis

The intercity team of Gene Hermann, Warren Jones, jr., and Mrs. Irene Surguy, of Washington, and Mrs. Leon Landauer and Herbert Gerst, of Norfolk, leading at the half-way mark in the fifth annual Carvel Hall-Annapolis Bridge Tournament, fell by the way side last night and lost the team-of-four competition to a quartet of high-powered Philadelphians.

The winning team was composed of Joseph Davis, Stanley Fenkel, Simon Becker and Nathan Agran. They won 34½ matches to the 32 won by the Washington-Norfolk combination.

Another intercity collaboration garnered third place with 29 matches. They were Mr. and Mrs. James Lemon, Washington's leading married pair players, and Leroy Thurtell, of Washington, and R. L. Miles, jr., Norfolk.

Mrs. W. Scott Athey of Washington and W. E. Fairbanks of Jacksonville, Fla. topped a field of 28 pairs to win Saturday's open pair event with a point score of 227.8.

Second prize went to Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Evans of Philadelphia, who tallied 223.3 and nosed out by only two-tenths of a point Agran and Becker, winners of the 1941 open pair title.

Trailing were Colonel Gill and Bowie, Baltimore, 222.7; Fenkel and Dr. Frank De Paula, Baltimore, 216.0; Mrs. William R. Plum and Mrs. F. G. Vosburgh, Washington, 213.7; Mrs. Behrend and Grinsfelder, Baltimore, 213.0; Mrs. Ben Golder and Charles J. Solomon, Philadelphia, 201.6; Louis Newman and Dr. A. J. Steinberg, Washington, 201.5.

The Carvel Hall pair game, a special Saturday event in which membership in the American Contract Bridge League was not required was won by Mrs. Dora Schwartz and Mrs. A. J. Steinberg, of Washington. They scored 105 points.

O'Connell's Conducting Pleases Big Audience On a Perfect Night for Watergate Concert

Charles O'Connell conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in the seventy-third "Sunset Symphony" concert on Sunday night at the Potomac Watergate. Soloist: Igor Gorin, barytone. Program: Carnaval Overture (Dvorak), Piece Heroique (Franck), "To the Little Star" (Musorgski), Chaklovitov's Aria from "Khovanshchina" (Musorgski), "Viut Vitre" (Ukrainian Folksong), "Song of the United Nations" (Shostakovich), Symphony No. 5 in E minor (Chaikovski).

Threatening clouds obligingly drew away to the west late yesterday afternoon, leaving a clear sky for the Potomac Watergate concert of the National Symphony Orchestra last evening, and this token of an uninterrupted program drew a large audience to the river terraces. As the twilight deepened into darkness and a cool breeze swept upstream, thousands of music lovers found relaxation from their cares and momentary forgetfulness of a warring world. The placidity of air and water lured other listeners in canoes and cabined launches which clustered near the orchestral barge.

BROWN

Making his second appearance of the summer as guest conductor, Charles O'Connell presented a program predominantly Russian in character, and emphasized that national flavor by having as soloist the sonorous barytone, Igor Gorin. The two compositions not conforming to the rule came from Bohemia and France: Dvorak's "Carnaval Overture" and Franck's "Piece Heroique." The overture is becoming rather threadbare, and the public might appreciate the substitution now and then of "In Nature" or "Othello," the other two parts of the triple overture which the composer designed as a single work. Franck's organ piece, well orchestrated by Mr. O'Connell, is a welcome addition to the repertoire.

Igor Gorin inrtoduced for the first time to an American audience Dmitri Shostakovich's "Song of the United Nations" with the result that a repetition was immediately demanded. The song has a tune as simple and rhythmically infectious as a Sousa marcl., and if Mr. Gorin had pressed his advantage, he could have had the crowd singing it with him in a few minutes.

The soloist also offered three other Russian items: The Ukrainian folksong, "Viut Vitre," Musorgski's "To the Little Star" and Chaklovitov's aria about "the German barbarians" from the third act of the same composer's opera, "Khovanshchina." His voice has a fresh and vigorous quality, his diction is clear, and he keeps his tone steady on the breath.

For the second part of the program Mr. O'Connell chose Chaikovski's fifth symphony and thereby delighted all those with whom this work is a favorite. Now firmly established in popularity, the fifth symphony had a lukewarm reception at its first performances in St. Petersburg and Praha, and Chaikovski was so downcast that he wrote: "There is something repellent, superfluous, patchy and insincere in this work which the public instinctively recognizes." He would have to revise that verdict today.

Your Daily Health Quiz
How Many Quarts of Blood Has the Average Person?
It is an accepted fact that normally we have 5 or 5½ quarts of blood.
Although our blood constitutes about 1/12 of our body-weight, most folks pay no attention to it whatsoever. When they feel tired or under the weather, they always blame it on something else. Actually, at the first sign of fatigue, lack of energy, strength, or when you feel yourself slipping physically, check up on your blood right away.
You know, if your blood is thin, pale and watery, and unable to feed the hungry tissues with life-giving oxygen, sickness and disorders set in more quickly. But if blood is rich and pure, it contains chemical substances and cells capable of repairing damaged body tissues and replenishing our strength and energy.
So don't take chances. Do something about your blood today. Get a bottle of Boncquet (pronounced Bon-Kay) Tablets. Here is an amazing new discovery, by an eminent biochemist, that is designed to build rich red fighting blood. It contains, in concentrated quantities, the raw materials so woefully lacking in the modern diet, and so urgently needed by the body tissues . . . the most important being the active principle of raw liver (the red blood cell manufacturing factor), organic vegetable iron and other minerals, vitamin B complex, fortified with pure crystalline vitamins B and G, and assimilable calcium and phosphorus. This "liver principle" is sometimes called anti-anemic substance.
Try Boncquet Tablets for 9 days. If you wish, have your blood count taken by your physician before and after this test. If you don't feel better, look better, and have general all-around improvement . . . and most of all, show a marked increase in your red blood cell count . . . your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Raid Wardens to Sell Safety in Every Home

Deputy air raid wardens—or instructors appointed by them in their respective areas—are going to school again Wednesday night to learn a few new wrinkles on how to sell protection to the people.

As a result of the one-day streamlined course, officials at the chief air raid warden's office expect every Washington home owner to be better qualified to protect his family and property in the event of an air raid.

The program, calculated to put in each home the seven or eight indispensable adjuncts to successful bomb and fire fighting, has not been ordered into effect yet, but Leslie C. Rucker, executive assistant to Chief Warden William J. Mileham, said last night that plans had been completed. In about two weeks, wardens will canvass their sectors until each home is visited and persons living in them instructed in the cardinal principles of getting the best possible protection out of using the gadgets and safety devices found in almost any house.

Trained in "Approach"

After the instructors have been familiarized with the program, under the direction of Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, they in turn will catechize the wardens in their areas. They will learn how to approach the home owner to gain his confidence; how to make him understand that the precautionary measure is not an invasion of his privacy, but an attempt to provide Washington with the most workable unofficial home defense program, and how to assist people to convert household appliances to air raid defense purposes.

A return visit will be made a couple of weeks later and those who have adopted the plan will be given a window sticker for the whole neighborhood to see that the house is safe according to the plan outlined by the chief warden's office.

The requisites are listed below:

1. Is supply of dry sand, shovel and two buckets available on top floor? This is to make certain the sand isn't in the back yard, the shoved in the basement and the buckets in the closet; that is, that the necessary items for fighting incendiary bombs are available without losing time to scramble through the house.

2. If stirrup pumps are a part of home equipment, are the accompanying pails of water filled? Because of the expense involved, stirrup pumps are not required, but if they are to be used, the pails of water must be ready.

3. Is a water container in readiness to be filled quickly for use in the blackout room on the alert signal. This is for drinking water and may be any clean empty jar or bottle on the kitchen shelf.

4. Is one room completely blacked out? This has to be either a permanent blacking out, or blankets or curtains that could be immediately drawn across the windows.

5. Is a shielded flashlight in readiness for use, battery checked? Mr. Mileham said he thought most homes had at least one flashlight, but in case they didn't, he believed they could be purchased for less than a dollar.

6. Is a large, substantial table available for protection? The table should be in the room chosen for refuge, one with the least possibility of flying glass.

7. Is a supply of sweets and canned fruit juices available for emergency use? Mr. Mileham particularly urged chocolate bars, which, he said, are very energizing.

8. Is the attic completely clear? Is the cellar clear of trash? Of the former the air raid chief said he didn't mean "tidied" with the wife's clothes in one neat pile and the husband's in another, but with all inflammable materials removed.

Zone Warden Post 13 Open for Inspection

Zone Warden Post 13, of the Columbia Heights Area, 1500 Monroe Street Northeast, will open for inspection Mondays through Fridays from 8 to 10 p. m. henceforth, Zone Warden Joseph L. Maguire announced yesterday.

Residents are invited to inspect equipment purchased by the zone's finance committee and the Metropolitan Area Civilian Defense Office, he said. "See how your money has been spent," he suggested.

Earthquake Recorded 2600 Miles From D. C.

The seismograph at Georgetown University yesterday recorded a "slight to modesate" earthquake at a point 2600 miles from Washington. The direction was uncertain.

The tremor began at 6:37 a. m., reached a maximum at 6.55,and ended at 7:30 a. m. University officials were unable to say last night what part of the globe was affected.

George F. King Held for Inquest Into 'Fight' Death

Police last night were holding George F. King, 121 D Street Northwest, for a coroner's inquest at noon today into the death of James M. Ridgeway, 53, of 801 G Street Northwest, who, according to stories furnished police, died Saturday of injuries received in a fight at a party in an apartment at 3003 P Street Northwest.

Summoned to the inquest as witnesses were four others including the dead man's wife and another woman. An autopsy conducted yesterday at the morgue determined that Ridgeway died "of injuries to the head."

According to police, Ridgeway's death was reported to them by a physician who was summoned to the apartment. When the police arrived, they found two men and Mrs. Ridgeway in the apartment and said that apparently two other women and another man had just left. They were told, police said, that Ridgeway had been knocked down during a fight with one of the men, and struck his head on an iron bedstead as he fell.

HOUDRY HAS IT!

The Houdry Process Corporation has contributed importantly to America's war effort. Without the principle of catalytic cracking for producing gasoline, America's requirements for 100-octane aviation gasoline could not have been met.* Houdry was the first commercial process utilizing catalytic cracking. A new and simplified application of the same process is ready for the making of synthetic rubber.

The Key to synthetic rubber is

BUTADIENE

It is the main ingredient of the best synthetic rubber. The Houdry Process will produce it in greater quantity, in a shorter time, saving millions of dollars over any other petroleum process!

Ex-Congress Members Can Still Get Benefits

That new retirement act that became effective on July 1 and which caused such a ruckus because it originally covered members of Congress still stands to benefit them. A member of Congress who is defeated for reelection can get himself a Government job and the years he spent in Congress will count toward his retirement. For example, former Senator Henry F. Ashurst of Arizona spent about 30 years in the Senate. Now he's an official of the Justice Department. His service in the Senate will count toward his retirement. The same is true of Maury Maverick, Addison Smith and other former Congressmen now in the executive branch.

But why pick on the members of Congress? In the departments you've probably noticed elderly former employes being brought back on the job, even people that have been retired. The new liberalized retirement law gives them a chance to get a higher pension by working only a month or so. George Carter, former public printer, is now working in the Senate. Former Secret Service Chief Moran is back at Treasury. Both can work awhile and retire, Moran on a higher annuity and Carter on some sort of a pension since he wasn't drawing one before. However, whether it be a former Congressman or department official, contributions covering all past service must be paid into the retirement fund.

Another Pay Raise Plan

Another compromise pay raise plan is being debated. It proposes that time and a half be paid to all employes earning $2900 and under. However, employes paid over $2900 would be paid overtime based on just that amount no matter whether they were paid $3500 to $7000. A number of private Washington institutions have adopted similar plans to offset higher living costs. The proposal provides for a minimum 44-hour work week which would mean that per annum employes paid $2900 and under would be guaranteed at least an 11 per cent wage increase. Employes who don't work on a per annum basis would be given a straight 10 per cent bonus.

Civil Aeronautics Administration won't hire any more lady pilots to instruct would-be aviators. It has 42 now but the Army doesn't like them . . . The Office of the Petroleum Coordinator will hire 390 new employes. It won't hire dollar-a-year men. The agency pays its employes an average salary of $3000, one of the highest, if not the highest, in the Federal service . . . Twenty-eight different Federal agencies have their fingers on the oil industry. No wonder a coordinating agency is needed . . . A report to Congress is expected to be made this week on the 4000-odd employes on the Dies list.

Nelson Rockefeller told the House Appropriations Committee that he had contracted to hire David Saposs for one year at a $6500 salary. Saposs is studying labor in South American republics. He was the victim of persecution when he was at the labor board . . . The Senate this week is expected to pass the custodial pay raise bill and the bill that would permit Federal workers to accumulate up to 90 days of annual leave . . . Additional officers from the Coast and Geodetic Survey have been transferred to the War and Navy departments . . . Congress has appropriated $132,500 to bury Japanese and other enemy aliens who are moved inland by the War Relocation Authority. The agency estimates 120 will die a month and that it'll cost $75 for each burial. Most Japs prefer to have their bodies cremated.

Tough One for Cogswell

District Rent Chief Robert F. Cogswell had a tough one to decide the other day. Six Government girls shared a bathtub but one of them spent from 45 minutes to an hour each day in the tub. To speed up her bathing, the five other girls took off the bathroom door. The easy-going bather then protested to Cogswell that her rent should be lowered because the "service" rendered had declined . . . Cogswell solved the problem by getting the five girls to agree to put back the bathroom door and the sixth finally agreed to take 15-minute baths.

Chronic Condition

Dallas, July 5 (AP).—A woman telephoned Detective Secretary H. R. Nunn that her husband whipped her and asked what could be done.

Nunn asked, "Have you ever discussed this matter with police before?"

"Oh, lots of times," she replied. "This has been going on since our marriage 20 years ago."

D. C. Navy Officer Wins Promotion

Frederick C. Bamman, Central High and Syracuse University graduate whose home is at 6601 Fourteenth Street Northwest, has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant, senior grade, by the Navy, it was announced yesterday at the United States Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla.

BAMMAN

Lieutenant Bamman is 29 and only three years ago was a flying cadet. Engineering officer of a flight training squadron at present, Lieutenant Bamman has served on the U. S. S. Wasp and at the Naval Air Station at San Diego, Calif.

Michael J. Quirk, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy J. Quirk of 3718 Livingston Street Northwest, has just been awarded his wings at Spence Field, Moultrie, Ga. Quirk will pilot a pursuit ship at Newark, N. J.

He was graduated from St. John's College of this city, an studied at Catholic University three years.

Earthquake Recorded 2600 Miles From D. C.

The seismograph at Georgetown University yesterday recorded a "slight to moderate" earthquake at a point 2600 miles from Washington. The direction was uncertain.

The tremor began at 6:37 a. m., reached a maximum at 6.55,and ended at 7:30 a. m. University officials were unable to say last night what part of the globe was affected.

How Many Quarts of Blood Has the Average Person?

It is an accepted fact that normally we have 5 to 3½ quarts of blood.

Although our blood constitutes about 1/12 of our body weight, most folks pay no attention to it whatsoever. When they feel tired or under the weather, they always blame it on something else. Actually, as the first sign of fatigue, lack of energy, strength, or when you feel yourself slipping physically, check up on your blood right away.

You know, if your blood is thin, pale and watery, and unable to feed the hungry tissues with life-giving oxygen, sickness and disorders set in more quickly. But if blood is rich and pure, it contains chemical substances and cells capable of repairing damaged body tissues and replenishing our strength and energy.

So don't take chances. Do something about your blood today. Get a bottle of Bonquet (pronounced Bon-Kay) Tablets. Here is an amazing new discovery of an eminent biochemist, that is designed to build rich red fighting blood. It contains, in concentrated quantities, the raw materials so woefully lacking in the modern diet, and so urgently needed by the body tissues . . . the most important being the active principle of raw liver (the red blood cell maturing factor), organic vegetable iron and other minerals, vitamin B complex, fortified with pure crystalline vitamins B and G, and assimilable calcium and phosphorus. This "liver principle" is sometimes called anti-anemic substance.

Try Bonquet Tablets for 9 days. If you wish, have your blood count taken by your physician before and after this test. If you don't feel better, look better, and have general all-around improvement . . . and most of all, show a marked increase in your red blood cell count . . . your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Raid Wardens to Sell Safety in Every Home

Deputy air raid wardens—or instructors appointed by them in their respective areas—are going to school again Wednesday night to learn a few new wrinkles on how to sell protection to the people.

As a result of the one-day streamlined course, officials at the chief air raid warden's office expect every Washington home owner to be better qualified to protect his family and property in the event of an air raid.

The program, calculated to put in each home the seven or eight indispensable adjuncts to successful bomb and fire fighting, has not been ordered into effect yet, but Leslie C. Rucker, executive assistant to Chief Warden William J. Mileham, said last night that plans had been completed. In about two weeks, wardens will canvass their sectors until each home is visited and persons living in them instructed in the cardinal principles of getting the best possible protection out of using the gadgets and safety devices found in almost any house.

Trained in "Approach"

After the instructors have been familiarized with the program, under the direction of Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, they in turn will catechize the wardens in their areas. They will learn how to approach the home owner to gain his confidence; how to make him understand that the precautionary measure is not an invasion of his privacy, but an attempt to provide Washington with the most workable unofficial home defense program, and how to assist people to convert household appliances to air raid defense purposes.

A return visit will be made a couple of weeks later and those who have adopted the plan will be given a window sticker for the whole neighborhood to see that the house is safe according to the plan outlined by the chief warden's office.

The requisites are listed below:

1. Is supply of dry sand, shovel and two buckets available on top floor? This is to make certain the sand isn't in the back yard, the shoved in the basement and the buckets in the closet; that is, that the necessary items for fighting incendiary bombs are available without losing time to scramble through the house.

2. If stirrup pumps are a part of home equipment, are the accompanying pails of water filled? Because of the expense involved, stirrup pumps are not required, but if they are to be used, the pails of water must be ready.

3. Is a water container in readiness to be filled quickly for use in the blackout room on the alert signal. This is for drinking water and may be any clean empty jar or bottle on the kitchen shelf.

4. Is one room completely blacked out? This has to be either a permanent blacking out, or blankets or curtains that could be immediately drawn across the windows.

5. Is a shielded flashlight in readiness for use, battery checked? Mr. Mileham said he thought most homes had at least one flashlight, but in case they didn't, he believed they could be purchased for less than a dollar.

6. Is a large, substantial table available for protection? The table should be in the room chosen for refuge, one with the least possibility of flying glass.

7. Is a supply of sweets and canned fruit juices available for emergency use? Mr. Mileham particularly urged chocolate bars, which, he said, are very energizing.

8. Is the attic completely clear? Is the cellar clear of trash? Of the former the air raid chief said he didn't mean "tidied" with the wife's clothes in one neat pile and the husband's in another, but with all inflammable materials removed.

Zone Warden Post 13 Open for Inspection

Zone Warden Post 13, of the Columbia Heights Area, 1500 Monroe Street Northeast, will open for inspection Mondays through Fridays from 8 to 10 p. m. henceforth, Zone Warden Joseph L. Maguire announced yesterday.

Residents are invited to inspect equipment purchased by the zone's finance committee and the Metropolitan Area Civilian Defense Office, he said. "See how your money has been spent," he suggested.

George F. King Held for Inquest Into 'Fight' Death

Police last night were holding George F. King, 121 D Street Northwest, for a coroner's inquest at noon today into the death of James M. Ridgeway, 53, of 801 G Street Northwest, who, according to stories furnished police, died Saturday of injuries received in a fight at a party in an apartment at 3003 P Street Northwest.

Summoned to the inquest as witnesses were four others including the dead man's wife and another woman. An autopsy conducted yesterday at the morgue determined that Ridgeway died "of injuries to the head."

According to police, Ridgeway's death was reported to them by a physician who was summoned to the apartment. When the police arrived, they found two men and Mrs. Ridgeway in the apartment and said that apparently two other women and another man had just left. They were told, police said, that Ridgeway had been knocked down during a fight with one of the men, and struck his head on an iron bedstead as he fell.

Miss Hayworth Puts Jack Under Her Salary Ceiling

Coming to Earle in Four Columbia Starrers; 'The Invaders' Comes True in Recent Events; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

NO WONDER Columbia upped Rita Hayworth's weekly pay check from $800 to $2000—taking for granted that the wire reports of the new articles to which Miss Hayworth has been signed aren't kidding. Even if the quality of her screen performances were not what it is, their quantity would seem to justify the tilt as just compensation for wear and tear on the nervous system, if nothing more.

RITA HAYWORTH

Of the 48 productons on Columbia's current schedule, Miss Hayworth will account for an approximate 8 per cent. These four pictures, I am assured by Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner interests, and that highstrung Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, Mideast division manager for Columbia Pictures, will be coming along to the Earle screen in reasonably rapid succession.

The first will be a flatteringly titled little item called "You Were Never Lovelier," with Fred Astaire as costar, a score by Jerome Kern and Xavier Cugat's Orchestra in there to supply the rhythmic background. The three to follow will be "Cover Girl," in Technicolor, with a flock of America's best known magazine cover models in support of the star; "Defense Town," with Humphrey Bogart, and "Miss Grant Takes Richmond," in which Melvyn Douglas will be Miss Hayworth's vis-a-vis.

For a youthful member of the dancing Cansino clan, who, a few short seasons ago, was pirouetting obscurely in run-of-the-mine night clubs south of the border, that is what might be conservatively called doing all righ'

Columbia, as usual, isn't doing so badly, either. In addition to the Hayworth films, Col. Galanty, suh, will be spraying the Earle screen with such other major releases as "The Commandos," starring Paul Muni and produced by Lester Cowan who, with Gilbert Miller, gave the screen the film version of "Ladies in Retirement;" "The American Way," from the George S. Kaufman-Moss Hart stage hit; "A Young Girl's Fancy," costarring Jean Arthur and Brian Aherne; "The Gang's All Here," a Cole Porter musical, co-featuring Janet Blair, Jack Oakie and William Gaxton; an as yet untitled film costarring Cary Grant and Rosalind Russell, and another unnamed opus, costarring Irene Dunne and Melvyn Douglas. If you care to ramble a little farther into the future, there will be, also, Olivia de Havilland and Brian Aherne in "Knight Without Armor;" "Destroyer," now in production in cooperation with the U. S. Navy; "The Desperadoes," a Technicolor business starring Randolph Scott, Glenn Ford and Claire Trevor; "The Return of Mr. Jordan," a sequel to "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," and "City Without Men," with Glenn Ford, Evelyn Keyes and Claire Trevor. And that should appease your anxiety for now.

Another Bond Rally According to Hoyle

As forecast here on the occasion of his last extra-curricular, out-of-town junket, "Bill" Hoyle, loaned to the Government from the publicity department of the Lichtman Theaters, is leaving Washington tonight to lay the groundwork for another War Bond sales rally in Cleveland on July 20. Acting as representative of Carlton Duffus' Special Events Section of the War Savings Staff of the Treasury Department, the high-pressure Mr. Hoyle will exploit another stellar troupe of Hollywood and stage stars, headed by Olivia de Havilland and Marion Anderson, of his first touring "company." Turning down the Municipal Auditorium, seating 8000, Bill bet the ball park's seating capacity of 20,000 or so against a rainy night. Nice judgment. Nobody could ever find out from the weather forecasts, anyhow!

It is being bruited about amongst the initiate that Jan Struther, author of "Mrs. Miniver," will be a Washington visitor this week. Formerly a member of the London Times staff, this noted writer, of late, has been engaged in an extensive lecture tour of America and has declared that she can perceive precious little difference in viewpoint and temperament between the people of the United States and the English. She is sure, according to report, that she might have set her Miniver family down in any one of a hundred spots in this country and they would have reacted exactly as they did in the book. When the film version of "Mrs. Miniver" comes to the screen at Loew's Palace, every American worthy of the name will be proud to believe that.

As Strange as Fiction, at Least

No longer ago than yesterday, when the papers were announcng the presence in Washington of the eight Nazi saboteurs, now in custody of the military for trial on death charges, we were thinking what chagrin the FBI coup must have caused the carpers who insisted that the plot of "The Invaders" was a bit too thick to swallow! Maybe it was telepathy, a simultaneous hunch, or something—it couldn't have been that "great minds" thing—but when we arrived at the desk, right on top was a letter from that Galanty fellow, of Columbia Pictures, laying stress on the same thought. "The Invaders" landed from a sub up around Hudson Bay and got pretty well across the continent before they were knocked off, one or two at a time, by Laurence Olivier, Leslie Howard and Raymond Massey. The only difference between fact and the fiction is that J. Edgar Hoover and his boys knocked off the "invaders" all in a bunch before they even got started. Phophetic, Uncle Sam Galanty calls it!

At the request of the salvage committee, Sidney Lust will repeat the "Scrap Rubber Matinees" in all his Maryland theaters on Wednesday at 2 p. m. Any article of outused rubber will be good for an admission. The first such special matinees, recently held in the Lust houses, netted more than five tons of rubber scrap that was turned over to the proper authorities. It is the hope of those in charge that this innovation will spread to every theater in the United States.

Welles of Good Will!

Hollywood, Calf., July 5.—Shakespeare said, "the evil that men do lives after them; the good is oft interred with their bones." And so it may be with those movie moguls who brought Orson Welles to Hollywood and gave him the moon with a fence around it. He could do no wrong. But when "Citizen Kane" was finished, and certain people learned what the story was about, they rocked with terror.

ORSON WELLES

Now Orson's been in South America for the past month, and has done the finest public relations job we've done down there. So what? Do they wait till he comes home and let him have a chance to see his film, "The Magnificent Ambersons" (which, by the way, lives up to its title, "magnificent")? No.

They throw it into a local release with a B picture, without any advance ballyhoo whatever—and just as our Government is making ready to give Orson a public reception in Washington, D. C., for the great good he's done in South America!

Metro bought a swell story for Wallace Beery—a series of letters by Ronald Brown, about a Navy man trying to be reinstated as a lieutenant commander. But he runs into difficulties when they learn that during prohibition he was a rumrunner. He claims, however, that he could catch those submarines off the East coast, 'cause he knows every cave and bit of shoreline from Maine to Florida.

He finally gets back in and writes a letter of thanks, saying, "I'm serving under the best commander you've got in the whole fleet—my son!"

Carmen Miranda came up to Charlotte first day of shooting and said, "I'm so happy to be in another picture with you."

But when Betty Grable's on the set, even Producer Bill Lebaron has difficulty concentrating.

Her next will be a sequel to "The Spoilers" called "Pittsburgh"—from Alaska to Pittsburgh in one full swoop. Aren't movies wonderful! Then she'll play in "The Traveling Salesman," in which she'll get second billing to Rosalind Russell.

Those amusing writers, Charlie Brackett and Billy Wilder, thought up that idea. But what a change from the old days at Paramount when Marlene turned down a contract which would have paid her a quarter of a million dollars per picture!

When William Saroyan sold "The Human Comedy" to Metro, he reserved the book right. Now he's back East seeing about its being published, and you can look for a good scorching preface on how he feels about our film moguls—and he uses language every one understands!

It will be even further, if Robertson finds himself reading about El Morocco, in Morocco.

Trans-Lux

A news shot in this week's holiday program at the Trans-Lux Theater shows Flying Yanks under Brigadier General Royce launch bombing attacks from New Guinea against enemy strongholds. One bomber comes back with its undercarriage shot away, but it slides in on its fuselage, a perfect emergency landing.

Other memorable highlights of this news section are coverage of how the R. A. F. bombs Germany with those 1000-plane raids, the new Canadian mosquito fleet in war against the U-boats, the report of Nazi horrors in Yugoslavia by Ruth Mitchell (sister of the famous Billy), who recently was released from a Nazi prison; Queen Wilhelmina's statement to the American people on what the war means to her country and to all of us, and the fifth draft enrolling for Selective Service the youth of America between the ages of 18 and 20.

This week the varied short subjects should be agreeable to virtually every taste. Tex McCrary appeals eloquently for support of the Air Training Corps and Kaltenborn informs on the likelihood of American forces policing other countries after the war; answers why the Government doesn't use along our coasts the thousands of sea-wise men and their small boats to fight the U-boats and tells of the importance of the battle of Libya.

A Screen Snapshots offers Janet Blair in a sprightly song number and Lieut. Jimmie Stewart and Charlie McCarthy in a funny line of talk. A picture, "Fighting Fish," is one of the big thrill incidents of the entire bill. Donald Duck is his usual riot of laughs in "The Village Smithy" cartoon.

Columbia

Norma Shearer's army of admirers will find her at her most radiant—but to slight dramatic avail—in "Her Cardboard Lover," up for a second F Street week at Loew's Columbia Theater.

With Robert Taylor and George Sanders as the foils for her loveliness, Miss Shearer, in this glossiest of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions, is engaged in the feminine prerogative of trying to make up her mind as between two lovers. Her vacillation is something to contemplate. So is Mr. Taylor's coquetry in a satiny, feminine negligee, designed to arouse the most venomous suspicions of his playboy adversary. Apparently having grown fast to the distant era of its original stage performance, "Her Cardboard Lover" seems strangely remote from the manner, mood and mode of the moment. It is, however, flippantly entertaining enough in a feathery sort of way. At any rate, those who go to see the picture really will be going to see Miss Shearer and she never has been personally more alluring.

The bill is completed by the usual diversity of short subjects.

Keen Choice for Keane Role!

Hollywood, July 5 (INS).—Rise Stevens sat in the projection room and looked at Edward Sheldon's "Romance," made in 1931. She was there because Louis B. Mayer, in thinking up stories for the Metropolitan Thrush, remembered his company owned this romantic play of early New York, in which an opera singer is the central figure. I must have seen Doris Keane, who created the role on the stage, in this play six times.

OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND

Interestingly enough, I was in the theater when Miss Keane fainted on the stage and the curtain rang down. I went backstage and overheard the doctor say something about a visitation from the stork—and did I rush to the Chicago Herald to print the news! There are certain portions in the play that are censorable but easily changed. I never liked Garbo in "Romance" and I was bitterly disappointed in the movie, but I think Rise Stevens would be swell with that God-given voice of hers.

Charlie Einfeld was looking at some stills from "In This Our Life" and said, "there is your Helen Morgan," Livvy, with that high hair-do, looks exactly as Helen did when I first heard her sing "My Bill," perched on the piano. Jack Warner agreed with Charlie and so now it looks as if Olivia will have the Helen Morgan role. She does look like Helen did when she was the toast of Broadway in "Show Boat" and other musicals. Furthermore, there is a sweetness about Livvy that was a part of Helen's makeup.

Rita Hayworth has the satisfaction of knowing that she is able to engineer her own affairs and that she and Columbia can get together without any nonsense. I say this because Rita's $800 a week has been upped to $2000—a $1200 weekly raise which is one of the largest raises on record. She should be earning top money after "My Gal Sal," which has been so widely praised. Also she is so popular that whenever I have talked with the boys in Uncle Sam's service they have all told me how much they liked Rita and want to see her.

Notables See Fighting Men's Art Exhibit

A British field marshal, American Army and Navy officers, scores of buck privates and sailors from the decks and engine rooms, Government officials, tourists and Washingtonians saw the opening here yesterday of an exhibition of 117 paintings by service men who took their subjects from the flaming history they are making.

The exhibition, to run a month at the National Gallery of Art, consists of paintings selected from the more than 1500 entries in the competition sponsored by Life magazine with Army and Navy cooperation. Winner of the $300 first award, Pvt. Robert Burns, now stationed at Fort Belvoir and residing with Mrs. Burns at 208 South St. Asaph Street, Alexandria, Va., was at the opening to see his work, titled "Troop Movements," acclaimed.

Corpl. John F. Awtrey, employed in the art department of The Post before entering the Army, has two paintings, "Street Scene" and "Cafe Mood," among the 117 selected works.

Burns, 25, now in the engineers, was teaching at Rollins College when inducted into the Army seven months ago. His "Troop Movements," a study of a group of soldiers in an Army truck, was done specifically for the contest, he said yesterday. He got the inspiration in his first convoy trip. Prior to the ride, he studied for five years at the Yale School of the Fine Arts.

Private A. B. Stevenson, jr., of Fort Belvoir, has two action paintings among the 117. He won a $50 award. Technical Sergt. James A. Ernst, stationed at the War College here, had a work, "The Forward Push," a troop advance, included. The second award was won by Sergt. Bob Majors, with "Practice Landing," showing parachute troops in action. The third prize winner was Pvt. Edward A. Chavez, whose work is titled "Convoy Practice."

The director of the gallery and Mrs. David Finley gave a luncheon yesterday at their Georgetown house, taking their guests later to the exhibition. Included in the party were the Swiss Minister and Madame Bruggmann; Field Marshal Sir John Dill and Lady Dill, Dwight Davis, Mrs. Loring Christie, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Averill Clarke and Colonel and Mrs. Harry McBride. The president of the Civil Service Commission and Mrs. Harry B. Mitchell headed Government notables at the opening.

Finley commented that "the value of the many pictures submitted in the competition lies not only in the high quality of the work, but also in the more important fact that these soldier and sailor artists have reproduced history as they have seen it and lived it. The exhibition is a stimulating one . . ."

With the close of the exhibition here, the paintings will go on a Nation-wide tour under auspices of the American Federation of Art.

That's Not Hay

Farmer Drops $400 in Pig Sty, Cost of Pork on Hoof Goes Up

The telegraph news wires carried these briefs yesterday:

It cost Adam R. Martin of Maugansville, Md., about $200 to feed the hogs—and it wasn't hay.

A wallet, containing $400, dropped from Martin's pocket and the hungry hogs switched diets with gusto. Before Martin could interfere, the wallet was chewed to bits and half the money was eaten or badly torn. After a long search Martin recovered about $200.

A Chicago father, going to his son's school commencement, discovered his son had been playing hookey for the last two years.

Two Hutchinson, Kans., boys, inspired by the example of Carry Nation, started a campaign of destroying beer signs.

A man was arrested in Canton, Ohio, for stealing 20 gallons of fish worms.

The Ohio Compensation Commission got a claim from a saleslady who had sprained her wrist trying to get a girdle on a customer.

A St. Louis motorist, pinched for driving through a red light, told the judge that there were nine traffic lights at the intersection and at least two of them were green.

197 Violent Holiday Deaths Recorded in Nation's Weekend

By the Associated Press

As the Fourth of July weekend drew to a close last night, the Nation counted its dead from violent causes at 241—far fewer than when Independence Day was celebrated with few restrictions in the years of peace.

Last year's toll of lives for a three-day weekend, Friday through Sunday, was 628, of which 384 were traffic victims.

Death took 124 lives on the country's highways yesterday and Saturday, while 67 persons were drowned and 50 died in other forms of violence. There were no fireworks victims reported.

Traffic Decline Is Cause

The Nation-wide campaign to conserve tires and the gasoline shortage along the Eastern Seaboard was the chief reason for a general decrease in traffic and fatalities.

Although many more American families passed the holidays at home than in previous years, there were few home accidents reported. Federal restrictions on pyrotechnic displays in coastal areas and strictly enforced local safety laws accounted for the lack of fireworks victims.

California Tops Lists

A total of 18 traffic victims were counted in California, which far outstripped the other States. Ohio led the States in reported drownings with a total of 8.

In Connecticut a man choked to death on a piece of meat at a picnic. A shipyard worker in Maine was crushed to death beneath an iron pipe. Six persons died in a fire in Oklahoma. One person was killed in New York State when a bridge collapsed.

The toll by States thus far reported:

Alabama, 3; Arizona, 2; Arkansas, 1; California, 25; Colorado, 2; Connecticut, 10; Delaware, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Idaho, 3; Illinois, 14; Indiana, 11; Iowa, 4; Kansas, 2; Kentucky, 3; Louisiana, 2; Maine, 2; Maryland, 3; Massachusetts, 4; Michigan, 11; Minnesota, 3; Missouri, 4; Montana, 1.

Nebraska, 4; New Hampshire, 2; New Jersey, 6; New Mexico, 1; New York, 13; North Carolina, 3; Ohio, 20; Oklahoma, 11; Oregon, 3; Pennsylvania, 11; Rhode Island, 1; Tennessee, 2; Texas, 7; Utah, 6; Virginia, 7; Washington, 17; West Virginia, 3; Wisconsin, 5; Wyoming, 1.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

ALL GIRL BAND TO LOUISIANA. Rae Scott's band, a group of clever and comely rhythm girls, all between 18 and 20 years old, will open at the Louisiana next Monday, be Washington's only girl band. Blonde Rae leads from the drums, and the band also includes three saxes, piano, trumpet and bass. Dot Jefferson is the featured vocalist and there's also a singing trio. The girls sounded elegant at their audition, should promptly become one of the town's most popular bands. The lasses' orchestra will play during the early part of the week, with Ray King's big 13-man band continuing to deal out swing on Fridays, Saturdays and Sunday.

Lou Breese, whose band opens at at the Victory Room tonight, will make a special trip to Fort Belvoir to play at the dedication and flag raising at the new theater for soldiers.

PRINCESS CHIO, lovely Chinese girl, will head the new "Beverly Hills Revue" opening at the Lotus today. Her costumes are said to be nothing less than magnificent. Also at Lotus you'll find Don Weissmuller, recently featured dancer in "High Kickers," and the Dell Brothers, who play the violin and mandolin while doing acrobatics.

TREASURE ISLAND, new luxury spot to be located on K Street near Seventeenth, has booked Jim McKenzie's Hawaiian Band, now at the Chicago's Congress Hotel, for its opening, now definitely set for Friday, August 7. Treasure Island will strongly resemble the Beachcombers' Club in Miami . . . From all indications, there'll be at least seven topflight new niteries opened in Washington by September. We'll tell you all about them later . . . Add on the fall openings of Wardman, the Carlton and Troika and it looks like a hectic autumn.

The winner of The Post's "Ideal Father Contest," Sergt. William C. Harpold of the Marine Corps, with Mrs. Harpold and their bood of seven, will be guests of honor at a dinner party at Olmsted's Restaurant tomorrow. The Post's advertising manager, Donald M. Bernard and his right hand man, Marshall Trippe, will be hosts.

RICHARD AND CARSON, comedy dancers who add gaiety to the Casino Royal Revue

JEFFREY LYNN gave up movie stardom for a private's uniform, but he got back into pictures at Mayfair the other eve. When Jeffrey sauntered in with two soldier pals, he was promptly spotted by oodles of lovely young creatures. Besides getting his autograph a couple dozen of them had their pictures taken with Jeffrey by Mary, the Mayfair's camera girl.

THINGS YOU'D NEVER DREAM. Del Casino, the handsome bandleader at Del Rio, is looking for his ideal girl. She must resemble Frances Dee or Mary Brian, love cocker spaniels and horses, have a lamblike disposition, a sparrowish memory and (hey, listen!) a "look of eagles in her eyes" . . . Merry-Land's Al Norton and "Red" Smith are raising corn (no cracks, please) on their farm near Herndon. They're specializing in Golden Bantam, Country Gentleman and Black Mexican which is really egg-plant purple . . . Maitre d'Hotel Arthur Marchisio of the Raleigh vows that back in 1894 he and another small boy found a huge fish with a human face and a beard on an Argentine beach. It was gone when they went back next day. It would be! But they say anything can happen in Argentina . . . The huge cauldron in the fireplace at River Bend is not for the cooking of customers. It's an apple butter kettle . . . Marcel Facchina, the suave manager of La Salle du Bois tells the most fascinating Pan-Am stories. He used to managed the food department of a South American liner . . . Mr. and Mrs. "Shipwreck" Kelly (she's the former Brenda Frazier) recently appeared on the Shoreham Terrace and not a soul recognized them! . . . Glen Echo's maestro, Paul Kain, says he hasn't had a single request for a conga this season . . . And here's a honey. Pete Macias, Lounge Riviera's bandleader, went hunting in his attic for rubber, found six shirts he'd paid five dollars apiece for a few years ago and hadn't seen since. They'd evidently been midlaid in moving.

Phelps Adams of the New York Sun, who did the lyrics for "Wave That Flag, America," is currently writing words for "Se Fue," new dance number by the Copacabana's Juan Velasquez.

BEST BETS IN MELODY. The Neptune Room's new and superb four keyboard combination. It goes into action between 4:30 and 5 every afternoon and for half-hour periods at 10 and 12 p. m. At other times the Hellmans and Collins and Arlo play as duos. Which is strictly all right, too . . . You've never really heard "Jealous" or "Shantytown" until you've heard them played by their composer, Little Jack Little, now at El Patio . . . If you yearn for either sad or lively Russian music, drop into the Balalaika and listen to Venesko, their rare violinist . . . "I Love You Only" receives more than its quota of fine and delicate shading when played by Durward Bowersox and Sid Willoughby at Burt's Trans-Lux . . . Hi Hat's Jack Neal is very diverting when he plays on a miniature and regular piano at the same time. He wants it known that the miniature piano is a real piano and not a toy . . . And what Ralph Hawkins' band is doing to "Jingle, Jangle" at Crossroads. Whee! . . . Milton Davis' Rainbow Room Band is giving a big play to Western songs and such oldies as "Golden Slippers" at the request of visiting business men . . . Gloria Hope, new singer in the Mayflower Lounge, sends the whole place into a beautiful trance when she carols sugary ballads . . . Fred Browne, of Arthur Warren's band on the StarHght Roof, gives that "rollin' down to Rio" touch to his baritoning of South American songs . . . You'll never hear "Embraceable You" sung more exquisitely than by Eve Knight of the King Cole Room . . . Opalita and Garcia, new piano, guitar and song team of Restaurant "400", perform with a finish that's worthy of any stage show. They're graduates of vaudeville. Opalita is a West Virginia girl and a relative of Representative Jennings Randolph . . . When you drop into the Plymouth be sure to ask their new piano star, Sammy Marks, to play his own composition, "Twilight Serenade." 'S lovely.

There's a reason for those exotic Slavic murals in the Burlington's air conditioned coffee shop to which dining has been transferred for the summer. The room was originally designed for a night club.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

They'll have another go at it this evening—the American and National League All Stars who clash this time at the Polo Grounds, but the picture is a bit different. It used to be National League pitching vs. American League power but it doesn't face up that way this year. The edge in both pitching and power seems to belong to the National League.

POVICH

Y'understand we're not picking the National League to win. We're merely pointng out that they seem to have the best of the figures. All down the line, virtually, the National League's All Stars have been packing more punch and the N. L. pitching, traditionally good, is good again. However, they still have to play the ball game and things can happen to the National League as late as two out in the ninth, as Teddy Williams demonstrated last year at Detroit.

Leo Durocher, who'll manage the National League's collection, has gotten a better break with his pitching than American League Manager Joe McCarthy. His A. L. colleagues are virtually letting McCarthy shift for himself this evening. They have been withholding no pitchers for All-Star duty and McCarthy will not have a single fully-rested hurler to toss at the National League Club.

McCarthy himself can scarcely squawk. He didn't withhold any of the three Yankee pitchers on the squad from games over the weekend. He tossed Red Ruffing, Spud Chandler and Ernie Bonham into the important series with the Red Sox, and that was pardonable enough. The Yankees have a pennant to win. Manager Del Baker pitched Al Benton a full game on Thursday and worked him two innings on Saturday. Edgar Smith of the White Sox worked Saturday and even Bucky Harris backed down on his intent to have Sid Hudson fresh and ready for All-Star duty. In an attempt to get out of last place, Harris pitched Hudson Saturday. The Red Sox didn't save Tex Hughson for the All-Star game. They pitched him yesterday.

N. L. Victory Shapes Up as Hunch Bet

The National League has done better by Manager Leo Durocher. He will have two pitchers fully rested—Claude Passeau and Vander Meer of the Reds. His own man, Whit Wyatt, hasn't pitched since Friday and could work a couple of innings. The National League seems to have taken the All-Star game more seriously.

If you want strictly a hunch bet, you'd have to take the National League to win today. Ever since 1935, the National League has been winning the All-Star games in every year they were staged in a National League park, and the American League has won each year the games have been in an A. L. park. At Cleveland in 1935, in Washington in 1937, at Yankee Stadium in 1939, at Detroit in '41, the American League won. In 1936 at Braves Field, in '38 at Cincinnati, in '40 at St. Louis, the National League triumphed. This year the N. L. is the host, at the Polo Grounds.

Today's scene of battle recalls proud National League memories despite the fact that the American Leaguers won the game staged at the Polo Grounds in '36. That was the day that Carl Hubbell gave the A. L. a bitter dose of National League pitching when he struck out Ruth, Gehrig, Foxx, Simmons and Cronin in succession with only Cronin laying a bat on any of his pitches. Cronin fouled one off. After Hubbell left the game, the A. L. rallied to win it.

Di Maggio Has Dismal All-Star Record

For some reason or other, Joe DiMaggio has never done well in the All-Star games. In his freshman year in 1936, at Braves Field, he was definitely the goat. He not only went hitless, but he misplayed a line drive off Gabby Hartnett's bat that expanded Hatrnett's single to three bases. DiMaggio was playing deep and the ball filtered through his legs. Joe was almost a ninth-inning hero in that game, though. With the bases full, he smashed a fierce line drive toward left field only to see Leo Durocher leap up and spear it with one hand. DiMaggio has been only a .160 hitter in his six All-Star games with four hits in 25 times at bat.

As any sort of an index to the relative strength of the two big leagues, however, the All-Star game is meaningless. A victory by any team on any given day must always be thrown out of the reckoning in any comparison of league strength. The White Sox beat the Yankees twice in a row at Chicago last week, but any attempt to rate the White Sox a better team than the Yanks would be laughed down. Team strength can be measured only over the course of a long season.

However, the National League needs to win this one worse than the American. Six defeats in nine All-Star games are irking the N. L., unquestionably, and the fact that the National has won only one World Series pennant since 1934 is also vexing that league. A few years ago, in the Saturday Evening Post of four million circulation, the National League was accused outright of being a minor league. Another All-Star game victory over the American League would make it feel better.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

One Observer Likes the N. L. Stars

New York, July 5.—Here's a good place parlay: The Japs, the Germans, Billy Conn and the American League All Star Team.

You'll have to wait a bit on the first three, but the American Leaguers ought to be your first runner-up, along about 9 o'clock Monday night. The National League team is the strongest ever to face the perennial favorites in this inter-league struggle. Last time we looked "the odds were even" but we suspect that at game time the National League will rule a slight favorite for the first time in the series.

CONSIDINE

As we see it, Leo Durocher can send better pitchers against the Americans—he is said to have Mort Cooper, Claude Passeau and Bucky Walters ready to pitch three innings each—and in addition the Nationals have good punch this year. Johnny Mize, Mel Ott, Pete Reiser and Joe Medwick probably will play the whole game. They're TNT lately.

Durocher can come back the next night in Cleveland, when the National Leaguers (absolutely) meet Lieut. Mickey Cochrane's hastily collected team of soldiers and sailors, and use Vander Meer, Derringer and Melton. The only things that will save the service men from a bad rout are (1) if Bosn's mate Bob Feller is in form and pitches the entire game or (2) the National Leaguers (positively) take things easily.

Feller Has Worked—But Some Are Rusty

Some of Mickey's military men have played a lot of baseball this summer. Feller actually seems to be working more often for the Navy than he worked for Cleveland. But most of the boys are rusty. They have had little chance to work together as a unit. Besides, the Army wouldn't let Cochrane have Hank Greenberg, Buddy Lewis, Hugh Mulcahy and Joe Marty. That makes a lot of difference in a ball club, but the Army is reluctant to give its athletes time off these days. It took its stand on Joe Louis, and wants to make as few exceptions to that rule as possible.

Now that we've talked ourself into liking the Nationals to win both games, and provided an advance excuse for Cochrane, we thing the reasons that the Americans are headed for defeat are that they've lost more key men to the armed services than the National and that such bulwarks as Joe DiMaggio and Bill Dickey are short of their best form. Ted Williams beat the Nationals last year at Detroit with two out in the ninth inning, when he poked one out of sight at a moment when only a home run would suffice. That was one of the big thrills of the season, as well as some sort of record for pulling chestnuts out of the fire. He'll be the toughest nut for those National League pitchers to crack Monday.

Both league presidents have asked the managers concerned to rest their All-Star game pitchers as much as possible before the game. By and large, they'll obey—though you can appreciate how great is the temptation to use a star pitcher in a critical game about this time of the year.

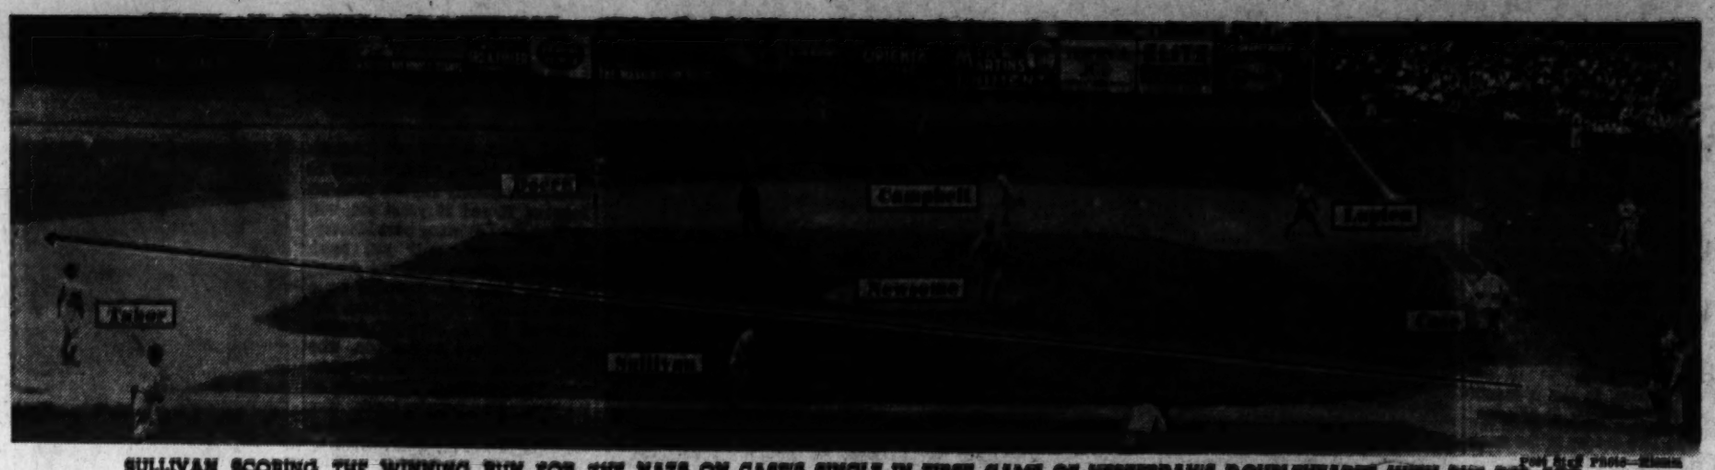
Saving May Be Costly to Managers

In some cases it might even go hard with a manager who, we'll say, keeps a star thrower on the bench in front of a partisan home-town crowd on July 4 or tomorrow's double-header so that he will be fresher for the All Star exhibition to be played far out of sight—and perhaps interest—of those home-town fans.

The catchers, infielders and outfielders do not matter. They can stand the work. But the history of the All Star game has been marked by a number of instances in which star hurlers showed up for the struggle too weak to work. Managers of All Star teams also have sometimes had to swallow their desire to overwork the star pitcher of a rival team, so that he might not be too effective the next time the manager in question led his league team into that pitcher's ballwick.

All in all, we think the All Star game is as good as a World Series. It lacks only a continuity of suspense. It could even capture that missing period of suspense if the big leagues had sense enough to let the fans pick the teams, via sportpages all over the country, a week or two before the actual game.

The games have done more good than the World Series has. The first nine games produced a splendid pension fund for indigent ball players, a worthy cause as peace-time causes go. This one will buy baseball equipment for Uncle Sam's fighters, and provide more funds for Army and Navy relief. The World Series has never had a beneficiary.



SULLIVAN SCORING THE WINNING RUN FOR THE NATS ON CASE'S SINGLE IN FIRST GAME OF YESTERDAY'S DOUBLEHEADER WITH THE RED SOX

Young Boston Pitcher Gives 5 Hits as Mates Hammer Carrasquel; Buck Strong in Clutch

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The Nats extracted one victory from the Red Sox in a doubleheader yesterday. They managed it early in the afternoon when Buck Newsom won the first game, 4-3, after a nine-inning struggle with his supporting cast. The Nats lost the second game on the sour note of a 5-0 shut-out at the hands of Joe Dobson.

The first game was a complete triumph for Newsom in the whooping presence of 18,000 customers. The Red Sox were deserving of only one run against his superb pitching but Newsom's teammates supported him like a gang landed on our shores by a Nazi submarine. Newsom weathered four damaging Washington errors and finally got the winning run in the ninth.

Newsom was out of the game, in fact, when Washington finally won it. He had been withdrawn for a pinch-hitter in the ninth. With the score tied at 3-3, Rookie Johnny Sullivan lashed a double down the right field line with one out and continued to third when Shortstop Pesky fumbled the throw from the outfield. In this crisis, Pitcher Hebey Newsome of the Red Sox lured Jimmy Pofahl into hitting a pop-up to Tabor for the second out.

Manager Bucky Harris then lifted Newsome for a pinch hitter, Bruce Campbell, who drew a walk, whereupon George Case grabbed some of the glory for himself by banging the first pitch into left field for a single that scored Sullivan and broke up the ball game.

Carrasquel Bows

That second game was distinguished chiefly by the five-hit pitching of Joe Dobson and the super-sensational fielding of Pesky, of the Red Sox. Dobson was complete master of the Nats, giving up four singles among the five hits he allowed.

The favorite of the 18,000 in that second game was Pesky despite his enemy regalia, Pesky turned in three successive plays against the Nats in the seventh inning that caused wonder as to why he isn't on the American League All-Star team. He went far to his right to throw out Bobby Estalella and on the next pitch he went behind second base to throw out Jake Early. He got his hands on a ball hit by Sullivan a bit later, but was too late to make a play. The gathering reserved its greatest applause of the day for Pesky's fielding.

Alex Carrasquel was the losing pitcher in the second game. He tried to keep the Nats in the contest by allowing only one run in the first six innings, but in the seventh a four-run outburst clinched the game for Boston. Carrasquel was the victim of Mickey Vernon's muff of Finney's line drive, among other things, but there were four solid hits in the inning—Williams' single,

Tobin Scores, Braves Split With Dodgers

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 5.—The Boston Braves and Brooklyn Dodgers broke even today in a double-header, Jim Tobin scoring his eighth verdict of the season for Boston in the opener, 6-5, while Larry French, the veteran southpaw, ran his unbeaten string to nine while capturing the nightcap, 2-1.

Brooklyn scored the winning run in the eighth inning of the second game without making a base hit. Arky Vaughan opened by drawing a base on balls and was sacrificed to second by Pete Reiser. Al Javery, the Boston hurler, tried to pick him off second and Vaughan went to third when the throw was wide. Joe Medwick brought him home with a long fly.

Boston counted first in the second inning, which Clyde Kluttz started with a single. Paul Waner beat out a bunt and Eddie Miller's fly to right enabled Kluttz to reach third. He scored as Serby Sisti was being thrown out at first.

Brooklyn tied it up in the third inning. Augie Galan singled and stole second. He took third on Vaughan's long fly to right and scored on Reiser's double.

From then until the eighth it was a pitching duel between French and Javery. After Brooklyn went into the lead, Manager Casey Stengel yanked both Max West and Waner, usually reliable hitters, for pinch batters in the ninth but the strategy was futile.

Miller broke up the first game

Chisox, Browns Split 14-2, 13-2 Battles

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 5.—The Chicago White Sox broke a six-game losing streak today by pasting the St. Louis Browns, 14 to 2, but fell back on their beaten path by dropping the nightcap, 13 to 2.

In the opener, Ted Lyons, pitching eight-hit ball, breezed to his season's seventh victory and his fourth in succession as he and his Sox mates ran up 16 hits against Eldon Auker and Stan Ferens. Auker was shelled from the mound under an 11-hit attack in less than three innings.

Lyons contributed a double and a single to his career's 252nd victory.

In the second game, Steve Sundra clubbed a homer, triple and double and held the Sox to six hits for his second victory against four defeats. Wally Judnich and Mike Chartak also belted four-baggers as the Browns collected 16 hits.

The double-header, played before 11,673, was embellished by the return to active duty of Manager Luke Sewell of the Browns for the first time since 1939, and the initial league test for Thornton Lee, the Sox's 22-game winner of last year who has been nursing a sore arm since the start of spring training.

Sewell caught the final four in-

Tribe, Tigers Divide Pair

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 5.—The Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers, chief contenders for the American League's third place, took turns today punching each other around in a double header before 31,082 spectators, the Tigers unleashing a 16-hit attack to win the opener, 10 to 1, and Mel Harder pitching a three-hitter to give the Tribe the nightcap, 5 to 1.

Harder, knocked out of box in less than an inning by the Tigers Friday night, came back to miss a shutout by only the margin of Pinky Higgins' eighth homer of the season in the fourth. He issued two singles the rest of the way and only one other Tiger passed second base.

The Tribe gathered eight hits off two Detroit pitchers, getting to Rookie Hal White for three runs in the first inning that were enough to win. Jeff Heath and Manager Lou Boudreau each drove in two runs.

In the opener Les Fleming's ninth homer was the lone run off Paul

Mighty Phils Spank Giants, 3-2 and 5-3

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 5.—The last-place Phils delighted a crowd of 8539 today by sweeping a double-header from the New York Giants, 3 to 2 and 5 to 3.

Splendid pitching in the pinches by Tommy Hughes, who won his third straight Sunday victory, gave the Phils the opener. The winning run was scored in the fifth inning with two out when Danny Litwhiler doubled and Ron Northey singled to break a 2-2 tie.

A four-run outburst off Tom Sunkel in the first inning put the Phils far in front in the nightcap. Ernie Koy doubled home three runs with the bases full and scored the fourth run on Litwhiler's single. Sunkel pitched to only four men and all reached first.

Si Johnson was credited with the victory in the second game, although Frank Melton came to his rescue in the seventh after the

Costello Post Loses

Earl Elliott, jr., was the pitching and batting star yesterday as National Cathedral boys beat Costello Post, 1941 champion of the American Legion Junior Baseball League, 6-3, on West Ellipse. Elliott allowed only 3 hits and made two for four himself. Bob Rummells chipped in 3 hits in 4 trips for the winners.

Lefty Wins Third Game For Champs

Wolff Scored Victory For Macks in Opener, Outpitching Donald Before 33,489 Fans

By the Associated Press

New York, July 5.—The New York Yankees divided a double-header with the Philadelphia Athletics today, hanging on to their four-game lead in the American League as the second-place Boston Red Sox split with the Washington Senators.

Roger Wolff pitched the Athletics to a 5-4 triumph in the opener, although he gave up 11 hits, and the Yankees came back to take the nightcap, 4-2, with a nine-hit attack on Herman Besse before 33,489 fans.

Singles by Tommy Henrich and Joe DiMaggio brought the first run off Besse in the opening inning after Mike Kreevich dropped Buddy Hassett's fly. Two more Yankee runs crossed in the second on Phil Rizzuto's hit, a wild pitch, a double steal and an error, while Joe Gordon scored the final tally in the sixth by singling, stealing second and coming home on a single by Ed Kearse. Lefty Gomez, who allowed 6 hits in 7 innings, received credit for the victory, his third of the season.

Double Plays Help

A pass to Kreevich, a passed ball and a single by Bob Johnson gave the A's a run in the first inning and they didn't score again until the eight, when Hal Wagner's pinch single followed a hit by Elmer Valo, a forceout and a walk to Bill Knickerbocker.

Gerry Priddy took over first base for the Yanks when Buddy Hassett developed a stiff neck in the fourth inning, and collected a double and single in his two turns at bat.

Three double plays helped Wolff gain his eighth triumph against as many defeats in the first game. Atley Donald started for the Yanks and suffered his second loss, compared with four wins. He yielded nine off Philadelphia's ten hits, put the Athletics ahead with a wild pitch in the sixth and gave way to Marv Breuer in the eighth, when the A's tallied twice.

Charlie Keller doubled home two runs for the Yanks in the last half of the eighth, behind a walk to Hassett and a single by DiMaggio, but they couldn't overcome the lead.

Doubles by Johnson and Buddy Blair and a single by Knickerbocker produced Philadelphia's eighth inning runs. They scored once in the fourth on a walk, a single by Dee Miles and an infield out, and again

Sellout Crowd to See Big League All-Stars Battle Tonight

Game Rated Even at 6-5, Take Choice

Begins at 6:30 P. M.; Chandler and Wyatt Or Passeau Likely To Open on Mound

By Bob Brumby
International News Service Sports Writer

New York, July 5.—Baseball will pound out a message of good faith tomorrow to our armed forces throughout the world. The American and National League All-Star teams clash at twilight at the Polo Grounds with the proceeds going to the ball and bat fund, which supplies Army and Navy centers with baseball equipment.

With the feeling between both sides the most intense since the All-Star series began ten years ago and with the fans aroused to the chance of helping such a worthy cause, officials of both leagues expect a sellout crowd.

Both sides are gunning more than ever for victory. In the past some of the managers were inclined to consider the regular pennant race above the All-Star contest, but this year that attitude is completely absent. The winner will play an all-service team in Cleveland Tuesday night.

Take Your Croice at 6-5

Betting is 6 to 5 and take your choice, although we favor the Americans because of events during the past few days.

Mort Cooper, the St. Louis Cardinal ace who had won nine straight, was kayoed by Boston Saturday. He was the one man the American League feared most.

Furthermore, both Joe DiMaggio and Ted Williams are getting back on their stick. Williams is becoming really vicious at bat again. At the Polo Grounds that means a lot to his side.

He broke up last year's All-Star game with a home run with two on in the ninth with a prodigious blow at Briggs Stadium in Detroit. This year he will be firing at a 257-foot right-field wall, popgun distance for the Red Sox fence leveler.

Leo Durocher, the eminent pool player and Broadway dilettante who manages the Brooklyn Dodgers and will direct the Nationals, is expected to start either Whitlow Wyatt or Claude Passeau.

Hal Newhouser of Detroit probably will follow Chandler and Johnny Vander Meer should be well rested for use by Durocher.

Boudreau, Cleveland, shortstop.
Henrich, Yankees, or Spence, Washington, right field.
DiMaggio, New York, center field.
York, Detroit, first base.
Gordon, New York, second base.
Keltner, Cleveland, third base.
Tebbets, Detroit, catcher.

Bill Dickey of the Yankees had been named to catch, but McCarthy today asked that Dickey be removed from the roster because of an injury to the instep and that he be replaced by Wagner of Philadelphia. The other catcher is Rosar of the Yankees.

Durocher expects to counter as follows:

Brown, St. Louis, 2b.
Vaughan, Brooklyn, 3b.
Reiser, Brooklyn, cf.
Mize, New York, 1b.
Ott, New York, rf.
Medwick, Brooklyn, lf.
Owen, Brooklyn, or Cooper, St. Louis, c.
Miller, Boston, ss.

The American League, which holds a 6-to-3 edge in games played, has been the favorite every year in the past. The odds were hammered down to even money this season because the junior loop lost so much power, either to the armed forces or due to other causes, while the National League has a phalanx of sluggers.

Big Johnny Mize, Mel Ott, Pete Reiser, Ducky Medwick and Willard Marshall, the only rookie on the team, all can blast for distance. Mize, Ott, Reiser and Willard are expected to do the most damage because they hit from the left side.

McCarthy has only two left-handers to call on—Edgar Smith of Chicago and Newhouser.

A notable absentee will be Jimmy Foxx, the only man who played in all nine previous games.

Paul Derringer, who might have made at least a token appearance tomorrow, was injured today while pitching for Cincinnati against Pittsburgh when struck on the kneecap by a line drive. He is not expected to be in All-Star uniform.

Ray Starr, who won his twelfth game today by beating Pittsburgh in the second game of a doubleheader, made a belated entrance into the All-Star line-up. His team mate, Paul Derringer, was struck on the left knee by a line drive during the first game and had to retire.

Manager Bill McKechnie immediately wired Durocher that Derringer was unable to play and Durocher picked the 35-year-old rookie to replace his ailing team mate.

The game will start at 6:30 p. m. (E.W.T.).

Everybody present, including club officials and newspapermen, will pay admission to the park. Should weather force postponement the game will be played Tuesday afternoon and the All-Service game in Cleveland on Wednesday.

Hale America Tournament at Local Clubs Send $1273 To Red Cross, With More Coming; Marcey Beats Smith

Congressional's 301 Tops All Totals; Columbia Second

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Hale America Golf Tournaments over the weekend at 11 clubs in the Metropolitan Washington area realized a total of more than $1273 for the American Red Cross with complete returns from nine clubs reported. The other two clubs should send the total well over the $1300 mark, far better than the first series of benefit tournaments over the May 30 weekend.

Congressional Country Club was again the leader with $301 while Columbia was again second with $202 but on a percentage basis the $135 totals by the nine-hole Indian Spring and Woodmont layouts compares favorably.

Golf professionals, golf committee chairmen and Red Cross workers assisted in the drive for the $1 entry fees. The U. S. G. A. awarded certificates to the low scorers and the entire sum is turned over to the Red Cross, with 85 per cent to the national chapter and 15 per cent to local chapters.

Argyle and Bradley Hills did not give complete returns but will have them available today. Several of the local clubs did not compete.

CONGRESSIONAL

Mrs. Arthur Hyler, a member of the Congressional Club and the Red Cross, was given most of the credit by Pro Wiffy Cox for the turn out of the club members for the Hale America play.

A seperate tournament was held yesterday in addition to Saturday's event with three tying for low net, F. E. McCardle, 77-8, 69, Dr. O. U. Singer, 84-15, 69, and W. W. Bayfield, 82-13, 69. John Agur was the gross winner with a 77.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Moorman turned in the lowest gross score, a 90-19, 71 in the Mixed Scotch foursome, also on a Red Cross benefit affair. Mrs. J. W. Godfrey and H. J. Klossner were low gross scorers with a 44-38, 82.

EAST POTOMAC

Earl Marcey scored a mild upset in the finals of the East Potomac spring match play championship by handing former Public Links Titlist Roy Smith a 1-up defeat in an extra-hole battle which required 28 holes for a decision.

Marcey, whose name is more often connected with the running of the public links tournaments than the winning, drilled a 30-yard drive down the twenty-eighth hole, chipped close to the cup and knocked in a short putt for a birdie 3 to top Smith's par 4.

They were all even at the end of the regulation 18 holes, Marcey with a 36-37, 73, and Smith a 36-38, 74. Instead of the usual quick-death method of deciding deadlocked matches they decided to play nine more holes and were still all even, both with 39's. It was then agreed to play until somebody won a hole and Marcey didn't wait long.

COLUMBIA

Tommy Webb, a former Columbia Club champion, and Ray Swearingen, the present titlist, led the gross scorers in Columbia's Hale America play with 3-over par 73's.

A three-way tie marked the net division, Randall Buckingham scoring 85-20, 65, C. J. Leonard of the Belgian Embassy, 89-24, 65, and Archie McLachlen, 93-18, 65.

Reds Banagan proudly announced a $202 contribution for the Red Cross and said it that wasn't the best in town he'd personally put Columbia over the top in the third series of Hale America tournaments on Labor Day.

Pro Adds War Bond To Raffle Prize, An Innovation

Army and Navy Pro Allan Burton presented an innovation in war bond prizes to golfers, one which he hopes will be taken up by P. G. A. members over the country.

Burton sponsored a raffle, with tickets at $1 each, for a set of iron clubs and sold 75 tickets, enough to take care of the price of the irons, with several dollars over. He put enough to the extra amount to purchase a $25 war bond which also went to the lucky ticket holder.

Thus D. E. Smith, whose name was drawn, today owns a new set of irons and a $25 bond. Burton hopes the P. G. A. members will copy.

CHEVY CHASE

Admiral and Mrs. R. M. Griffin won by the matching cards method in the Mixed Scotch Foursome play at Chevy Chase, scoring a 45—9—36, to Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Lambert's 46—10—36. Mr. and Mrs. J. Mitchell scored 49—12—37 for next low net while gross went to Mr. and Mrs. Landra Platt with a 40 for the nine-hole play.

The two-day contribution of the Chevy Chase membZers for the Red Cross events was $142.

WOODMONT

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Sauber, with a low gross 44, and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Nordlinger, with 46—10—36 net divided honors in a nine-hole Mixed Scotch Foursome at Woodmont which concluded two full days play for the membership of the nine-hole course in Hale America events which realized $135 for the Red Cross.

Other net winners in the mixed play were Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Peyser, 46—9—37, and Mr. and Mrs. Milton Gladstein, 48—11—37.

Bob Phillipson's 76—11—65 stood up for net honors in the Hale play while Howard Nordlinger's 73 was gross. The prize list:

CLASS A

Howard Nordlinger (gr.)	73
Bob Phillipson	76—11—65
Ed Workman	76—10—66
Willard Goldheim	81—13—68

CLASS B

L. V. Freudberg (gr.)	95
Jack Schulman, sr.	85—18—67
Dr. Sam Dessoff	87—19—68
Harry Davidau	90—22—68

CLASS C

Max Offenberg (gr.)	91
Al Bennett	98—26—72
Dr. D. H. Kushner	102—26—76

KENWOOD

J. J. O'Neil's 87-25, 62 won the low net certificate in Kenwood's Hale America play which returned $75 to the Red Cross nurses who collected the entry fees on the first tee. L. V. Bowly was second with 80-16, 64 and Dr. W. D. Lanier's 38-37, 75 was the best gross score. In the women's division Mrs. V. G. Myers, with 98-20, 78, and Mrs. H. H. Hughes, a 97, were the respective gross and net winners.

G. R. Hopkins posted a 37-38, 75, which stood up for low gross in an 18-hole sweepstakes competition while net winners, with full handicap allowance, were: C. Hennigar, 78-14, 64; L. V. Bowly, 80-16, 64; Dr. H. T. Parker, 82-15, 67; C. M. Dinkins, 77-10, 67, and W. L. Woodward, 78-11, 67.

In late afternoon pitching and putting contests G. R. Hopkins won the men's putting with five putts for three holes while Dr. H. Kirby Smith required six. Sam O'Neal and H. H. Hughes finished one-two in the approaching, the former just inside 4 feet from 50 yards while the latter was 4 feet from the cup.

Shada von Hein dropped an approach shot 6 feet from the pin to win the women's contest over Mrs. Marvin Wire who was 7 feet away. Mrs. A. D. Kane was the putting winner with five strokes for three holes.

INDIAN SPRING

Golf Committee Chairman Frank Mirth offered an added inducement for the Indian Spring members to enter the Hale America by lending a colorful setting to the club grounds which included 24 flagstaffs with Red Cross banners dotting the driveway, American flag and Red Cross fliers, pledge allegiance to the flag banners and shoulder stripes which Pro Mel Shorey pinned on all entrants.

Dr. L. M. Cubillier, the first of the 135 entries who turned over $135 to the Red Cross, posted at 43-41,84—18, 66, as the first score on the sheet and it stood up all the way to win low net honors. Bradley Burrows, a former several-times public links champion, led the gross scoring with a pair of level par 36s for a 72 while John Hitchborn, a guest from Syracuse, N. Y., had 39-35, 74.

Four tied for second net: R. H. O'Malley, 75—7, 68; H. M. Graves, 98—30, 68; W. F. Patterson, 90—22, 68, including a nine on the sixteenth which cost first prize, and Roy Weisberg, 90-22, 68.

In the women's division Mrs. K. S. Giles won gross with an 87 while Mrs. Frank Mirth had 101 for second. Net winners were Mrs. Earl Clary, 103—21, 82, and Mrs. J. E. Thomas, 105—22, 83.

The women members also compete in a Scotch foursome event with Mrs. Frank Mirth and Mrs. D. E. Stuart shooting a low gross of 46, while net winners were Mrs. L. Watzman and Mrs. K. G. Doub, 50—16—34, and Mrs. K. S. Giles and Mrs. Somes, 48—10—36.

Harry Graham made one of the best shots of the weekend at the club with a No. 8 iron which found the cup for an eagle deuce on the eleventh hole.

PRINCE GEORGES

Forest Thompson and Billy Griffin, the latter with his lowest round of golf, tied with one over par 73s for gross honors in Prince Georges' Hale America play as $64 was subscribed for the Red Cross in a hastily arranged event.

Howard Duckett had 85—18—67 for low net, while the respective gross and net winners among the women were Mrs. C. E. Purdy, 96, and Mrs. C. O. Jorg, 110—33—77.

Those who qualified for the finals in the driving, pitching and putting contests over six weeks of preliminary play shot it out in the finals yesterday and Doug Mattison was the men's driving victor with a 310-yard clout, while Pat Fogarty won the approaching and Tommy Lyle the putting with 16 putts for nine holes on the practice green.

Mrs. Charles Frownfelter won the women's driving with a 215-yard tee shot while Mrs. William O'Brien was to be approaching winner and Mrs. C. B. Hartman low scorer in putts with 17.

ARGYLE

Nolan I. Gibson planted his last alloted shot 32 feet from the cup on the twenieth hole to win Argyle's Flag Tournament with shots to spare as Ray Amsden and F. M. Johnson were second best in the cup on the nineteenth. H. Miller was just 18 inches short of the nineteenth cup on his final stroke.

R. Bedell, Fritz Williams and Shirley Chamblin finished in that order, all on the nineteenth green while Aubrey Dooley was among the prize winners just off the green on the first extra hole.

MANOR

The luck of a blind draw paired Harry G. Pitt and Mrs. W. R. Stokes as partners in Manor's Mixed Scotch Foursome play and hitting selective drives and alternates shots they breezed around the first nine in 33 shots, two under par, and came back in 40 for a gross winning 73. They played perfect scotch foursome golf on the out nine, with seven pars and two birdies.

Mrs. C. C. Dannaker and Herbert L. Lacey won low net with an 80-10, 70, over an 84-12, 72, by Mrs. C. E. McGowan and George H. Jones.

The Hale America play on Saturday which returned J. R. Patterson the winner netted $100 for the Red Cross.

WASHINGTON

D. B. Tuxhorn missed par figures by only three shots with a 73 and after deducting a juicy 12 handicap was the low net scorer in the Hale America Play at Washington Golf and Country Club with a net 61. The 119 players contributed $1 each for the Red Cross fund. J. H. Sheridan was second with 77-12,65.

ARMY AND NAVY

A three-way tie marked the Blind Bogey play at Army and Navy, F. M. Elliott, 88-15, 73; D. D. Wright, 86-13, 73 and F. G. Regan, 80-7, 73. R. D. Hoyt was next with 97-15, 82

BANNOCKBURN

The Brewer brothers and the Ward team, the latter no relation, advanced to the third round in the Barry Pate Cup play at Bannockburn, a two-man-team match play handicap affair.

Fellegrin and Martino defeated Hanrahan and Clary, 1 up, 19 holes; T. and W. Brewer won by default; Pass and Hunter defeated Fitzgerald and Brewere, 1 up; Anderson and verlait defeated Piper and Dye, 2 and 1; Tyler and Bendel defeated Cosby and Smith, 2 and 1; A. and O. Ward defeated Keene and Guzzinal, 3 and 2.

Odman Routs Bender, 6–3, 6–2, In Eastern Collegiate Finals

By the Associated Press

Montclair, N. J., July 5.—Lanky Bob Odman, University of Washington junior, used his withering forehand drivers to good advantage today to defeat Dick Bender, Princeton University captain, 6—3, 6—2, in the finals of the twentieth annual Eastern Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament.

The 22-year-old West Coast player, who had found the Montclair Athletic Club's clay courts slightly disconcerting at first, took advantage of Bender's numerous faults to sweep the varsity championship match in straight sets. Odman had played mostly on asphalt courts before coming East. It was his first major tournament victory.

Bender salvaged some glory out of the day by teaming with Edgar Buttenheim to win the doubles crown for Princeton with a 6—1, 4—6, 8—6 victory over Lester Hirschfield and James McGuire of St. John's College, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The efforts of Bender and Buttenheim gave Princeton enough points to send their total over the 150 mark to bring possession of the team trophy. It was the first time the cup has been retired in the two decades since the tournament was inaugurated. At the start off the tourney last week the Tigers had needed 10 points for a permanent grasp on the trophy.

Earlier in the day Bender eliminated MacGuire in a semifinal match, 6—0, 6—3, and Herschfield and McGuire set down Phin Percy and Bill Godfrey of Navy, 6—4, 6—3, in a doubles semifinal.

28 Holes Needed To Decide Title At East Potomac

Clary and Bennett Make Hole-in-One Shots With Irons

Members of Indian Spring and Woodmont joined the hole-in-one club over the big golfing weekend, Earl Clary for the second time at the former club and Al Bennett made his debut at Woodmont.

Bennette watched a six-iron shot disappear into the cup on the eighth at Woodmont from 140 yards, with Leo Schlossberg, Col. F. M. Reiter and Harold Cohen as partners.

Reiss Meets DeChard on Benefit Card

8-Rounder Features Griffith Stadium's Show Tonight; Drew Family to Be Aided

By Tony Neri

Two former amateur champions will clash tonight in the eight-round main event of Promoter Joe Turner's benefit card for the family of the late Preston Drew when Al Reiss, 24-year-old Detroit heavyweight, makes his local debut against Jimmy DeChard, who is considered Washington's top fistic attraction.

Griffith Stadium will be the scene of action with the first of nine bouts to start at 8:45 o'clock in which 46 rounds of boxing is scheduled. With the exception of the out-of-town fighters' purses and bare operating expenses the rest of the expected $3300 gate will be turned over to the widow of Drew.

No definite information has been forthcoming on Reiss. However, he is quoted as being a fair puncher who has engaged in approximately 100 pro fights. He is not considered a boxer, but one who goes out there with the bell and throws punches.

DeChard Is Heavier

The strong looking Detroit fighter should provide a busy session for DeChard, who is seeking his eighth win in nine starts. DeChard will outweigh his foe by about 10 pounds, coming in around 189.

Weighing in ceremonies are scheduled for 2 o'clock today at the commission office in the Municipal Center.

Ray Carson will broadcast most of the bouts over Station WWDC.

Reiss took up local training quarters immediately upon his arrival last Thursday and says he's in good shape, although a few pounds under his ordinary fighting weight. He attributes the loss of weight to the sultry Washington heat.

DeChard, who will enter the ring a 6-to-5 betting favorite, has been training nightly at the Apollo gym. It will be his first start since outpointing Frankie Poreda on the Navy Relief card last month. With his loss to Joe Baksi the only blemish on his record, DeChard's handlers expect the local heavyweight to take Reiss in stride.

Jimmy has been brought along slowly since entering the paid ranks a year and a half ago. Some observers claim that he's been handled too carefully but that is the concern of Manager Frankie Mann, who has been in the boxing business a long time, and undoubtedly has seen many promising fighters burned out because they were rushed.

Picks DeChard

The writer picks DeChard to outpoint Reiss.

Three six-round matches, mostly local talent, head the supporting card. Lew Hanbury, seeking his second straight pro victory, meets a test in Wayman Stewart, local colored featherweight. Hanbury, managed by his father, who is an old Navy boxer, is fighting a pretty fair boxer and Stewart figures to give him a tough scrap, and he may lick him.

Roy Dunn and Ken Stribling, two District middleweights, meet in another six, and Georgie Parks, hard-hitting light-heavy conqueror of Gus Mirman, engages Dynamite Jackson in the other six.

Five four-rounders are as follows: Charlie Petro vs. Billy Morris, Danny Petro vs. Leon Hawkins, Eddie Kane vs. Curly Blum, Boby Gantt vs. Jimmy Hill and Leon Kennedy vs. Billy Lewis.

Vienna Cards Ahead

Johnny McPherson and Gordon Rice each pounded out 3 hits yesterday to lead the Vienna Cardinals to an 8-4 baseball triumph over Annandale at Annandale.

Cardinals Beat Cubs Twice, 5-3 and 11-6

St. Louis Pares Brooklyn Lead by Full Game On Timely Hitting and Six Double Plays

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 5.—Sweeping both ends of a bargain bill with the Chicago Cubs, the Cardinals today pared to 8½ games the lead held by the Brooklyn Dodgers, who split a pair. The Cards grabbed the opener, 5 to 3, and the nightcap, 11 to 6.

The determined Cubs used seven pitchers, five of them in the final contest, in an effort to halt the Cards, who got by with Harry Gumbert in the first fray and trotted a trio out in the afterpiece.

Although outhit in the second game, 10 to 11, the Cards bunched their efforts into two frames, the first in which they gathered five runs and the fifth in which they counted six times.

That wild fifth inning followed a four-run splurge by the Cubs in their half, during which Bill Nicholson and Lou Stringer smashed home runs consecutively.

Otherwise, it seemed, the Cardinals came up with a double play just when the Cubs appeared to be gathering steam. In all, the St. Louisans did the double killing six times.

Chisox Release Pete Appleton

Chicago, July 5 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox today announced the unconditional release of Pete Appleton, veteran relief pitcher who has seen service with six big league clubs since he first entered the majors in 1927.

Appleton, 37, was used in only six innings this spring, and only 27 innings last season. The Sox obtained him in December, 1939, from Washington along with Taft Wright in the Gerald Walker deal. Previously, Appleton pitched for Cincinnati, the Boston Red Sox and the New York Yankees.

Lawson Wins Penguin Title Of Sail Series

The Potomac River Sailing Association held its final two races of the season yesterday and in the closest of finishes, National Champion Walter Lawson's Potlatch won the penguin class title over George Dankers' Cat's-Paw.

Taking both races to come from behind after Dankers had beaten him Saturday, Lawson ended up with 21 2/3 points to 21 1/3 for his rival.

Prizes to all the winners were presented by Commodore Malcolm Lamborne, jr. of Capital Yacht Club.

Robert Orme's Blue Water took honors with 16 points, while Clark Daniel's Robert E. Lee was tops among the comets with 8 2/3 points, and Bud Weiser in Gypsy nosed out the Corinthian Yacht Club's Sea Scouts in Bobcat.

The Final Standings

20-FOOT CLASS—Blue Water, Robert Crane, 16 points; Vanguard, Warren Mitchell, 11; Eight Ball, Owen Oakley, 10; Spindrift, Lynn Eldridge, 6; Iris, Gaines Palmer, 3.

Hagerstown Opens Maryland's Half-Mile Season Tomorrow

Track Offers Minimum of $600 Purses

Meeting Is First Of Five in State; Betting Record Set At Charles Town

Racing fans hereabouts will have an off day, but tomorrow Maryland's small tracks will open their season with the inaugural program at the sporty Hagerstown course. The half-mile track will start a parade of the thoroughbred that will lead all over the State. Fifty days of racing, as usual, have been allotted and they will be divided into ten-day meeting, destined to keep the turf-minded busy until mid-September sends the horses to the mile ovals.

Following a fortnight at Hagerstown, the bangtails move to Bel Air, Cumberland, Marlboro and Timonium for successive sessions. Once considered strictly local propositions, Maryland's smaller tracks have come into their own in recent years, offering a good brand of horses, the totalizator, electric starting gate, photo finish and all the popular accessories of the large plants.

Plant Is Ready

General Manager Harold Bester reports the Hagerstown layout spic and span and awaiting the first note of the bugle that will send the horses out for action at 2:30p. m.

With betting records broken at numerous tracks last Saturday, Hagerstown rightly expects its biggest meeting. The Hub City is fairly boiling with war work and is prosperous enough now to support the meeting without outside patronage.

As usual in Maryland, the programs will be confined to eight races. The daily double will be on the first and second events. Hagerstown does not go in for steeplechasing, so the fans will have to wait for Bel Air to get their timbertopping.

The track has an overflow of horses even before the action begins. Minimum purses of $800 have served to lure thoroughbreds from Delaware Park and other points which generally dodge the smaller tracks. The cream of the Charles Town horses, including those of M. B. Goss, Bowes Bond, Mrs. E. D. Sowers, Galt Davis, A. V. Galotta and others, have been shipped over.

Officials Listed

The chief officials for the meetings will be: Stewards, George Brown, W. L. Harron, M. C. (Ty) Shea; racing secretary, Edward Brennan; mutuel manager, Donald Hay.

Charles Town's victory meeting closed in a blaze of glory. Last Saturday's crowd set a new record for betting at the West Virginia course, wagering $236,108 to top the previous mark of $224,101. Officials are busy checking on the 18-day session which went all out for Army and Navy relief and West Virginia charities. It will be a week before the final figures, running into thousands of dollars, will be announced.

W. H.

Bill Bennings

Whether or not he has earned it, The Post demon handicapper is taking a day off. We suspect that he will spend the time trying to find the word "winner" in a dictionary. At any rate, Bennings will return to action in tomorrow morning's Post, featuring the Hagerstown track.

Jockey Landolt Drowns in Fall

Detroit, July 5 (AP).—Charles Landolt, 34-year-old Louisville jockey, drowned late yesterday in Lake St. Clair when he fell off a small cruiser owned by Ford Harnden of Detroit.

Landolt did not have any mounts at Fairgrounds yesterday and accepted Harnden's offer of a boat ride. He was accompanied by his wife and two sons.

While cruising in deep waters, Landolt decided to go swimming but was advised to wait till the boat was nearer to shore.

A few minutes later, while the boat was going at full speed, Landolt fell overboard. He attempted to swim back but the tide was against him and he went down before the cruiser could reach him.

Coast Guardsmen were dragging the lake today for the body.

Pistol Title Won by Reeves At Quantico

By the Associated Press

Quantico, Va., July 5.—Harry W. Reeves of Detroit won the .45-caliber national match course (individual) pistol event of the twenty-first annual meet of the Eastern Small-Bore Rifle and Pistol Association today with a score of 286 out of a possible 300.

The score equaled the national match record for the Camp Perry course.

Reeves won nine other pistol events in the shooting competition which climaxed a four-day school of rifle and pistol instruction for 500 members of the association. The marksmanship school was directed by Maj. George C. Van Orden, U. S. M. C.

In the .45-caliber four-man team, national match course event, the Quantico marines' No. 2 team turned in high score, 1040 out of a possible 1200, but declined to receive any award. First place went to the Great Lakes Pistol Club of Detroit with a score of 1021. The Metropolitan Police team of Washington, D. C., took second place, also with a 1021 score, while third place went to the Pittsburgh Revolver Club with a 961. The Marines' No. 1 team scored 1008.

Pirates Take Reds, 4-3; Lose Nightcap, 5-2

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, July 5.—Pitcher Ray Starr copped his twelfth game of the season, 5 to 2, today to give Cincinnati an even split in a double bill with Pittsburgh after the Pirates had grabbed the opener, 4 to 3, but the National League lost one of its pitchers, Paul Derringer, for tomorrow's All-Star game in New York.

Derringer, who started the opener for the Reds, was felled by a line smash from Bob Elliott's bat during a three-run Pirate rally in the sixth inning. Physicians ordered an X-ray to determine the full extent of an injury above the left knee cap.

Cincinnati Manager Bill McKechnie picked Starr to replace his injured teammate in the All-Star game.

Rip Sewell had to pitch out of several tight spots to win his eighth game of the season in the opener. He was touched for 12 hits.

In the nightcap Luke Hamlin failed to last the first inning for the Bucs. Gerald Walker cleaned the bases with a double and knocked Hamlin out during a four-run rally.

Nats, Bosox Divide Pair Before 18,000

The Nats never made more than one hit in any inning off Dobson. Vernon tripled to right center with two out in the sixth, but the Nats couldn't score. And they couldn't score, either, despite two successive Boston errors in the ninth.

In the second inning, Roy Cullenbine averted at least two Boston runs with the fanciest outfield catch of the season at the stadium. With two on base, Cullenbine actually caught Conroy's long fly into the left field corner after it passed over his head and he speared it with a one-hand backhand catch that bordered on the impossible.

In the first game, the Nats gave Newsom two runs to start with, unloading three hits against Heber Newsome in the first inning. Case beat out a bunt toward first and moved to second on a wild pitch, but he was out trying to take third on Spence's smash to Pesky. Vernon followed with a single to right, and Spence scored from third on Cullenbine's infield out. Estalella's single to center moved Vernon home.

Case Fumbles Ball

The Nats got the Red Sox a run in the second inning. Williams banged a single into right field and Case contributed a two-base fumble on the ball. Then Sullivan made a wild chuck to first on Doerr's grounder, Williams scoring. Doerr went to second on the error but with none out Newsom limited the damage to one run.

Newsom was the victim of his own infield again in the fifth when the Red Sox tied the score at 2-2. Estalella threw wild to first on Peacock's grounder with none out and the runner was safe. A sacrifice and DiMaggio's single scored him.

Hitless for three innings, the Nats suddenly came up with a run in the fifth to move in front 3-2. Sullivan beat out an infield hit and took second on Pofahl's single. Newsom fanned and Case flied out but Spence lofted a two-bagger into left field that scored Sullivan. Williams got one hand on the ball but failed to hold it.

Spence averted a Boston run in the seventh when Peacock tried to score from second on Pesky's single to center. Spence made a bull's-eye throw into Early's mitt and Peacock was out. In the eighth the Red Sox got the tying run when Finney led off with a triple over Cullenbine's head and scored on Williams' grounder to Pofahl.

There was more trouble for Newsom in the ninth, but not of his own making. Vernon dropped a throw from Sullivan on Conroy's grounder to start matters. Newsom's attempt to bunt was a soft liner that Vernon grabbed for the first out, and with two out Pesky doubled down the right field line. But Newsom got rid of Finney for the third out and their own ninth the Nats finally won a ball game for him.

Jacobson Beats Naiman, 2-1; 4-Way Tie in Sandlot League

Miller, Taft Also Win 'A' Games

Ross Engineers, Victory Club Score In National City League Contests

A four-way tie exists in Section A of the National City League after Jacobsen upset Naiman, 2-1, yesterday on the Ellipse. Miller Furniture and Taft, who beat Ninth and New York Avenue Lunch and the Washington Eagles, respectively, hold the top spot with Jacobsen and Naiman, all having won twice and lost once.

In Section B, Ross Engineers routed Capital Transit, 14-8, and the Victory Club defeated Boyle's, 5-1.

Creel Brothers scored a 6-5 victory over Kavakos in the Junior Section. The Eastern Branch of the Boys Club beat Immaculate Conception, 15-1, and Police Boys Club No. 5 edged out Bennings, 3-2, and lost to Pizza, 6-2.

Bi-Staters Beat Cameo, To Take Series

Westernport, Md., July 5.—Shoving a single run in the last of the eleventh after two men were out, the Bi-State Colts of the Cumberland district shaded the Cameo A. A. of Washington, D. C., 6 to 5, here today to take the three-game series.

The two games split yesterday's holiday two bill, the Furniture men winning, 8 to 1, in the nightcap, after dropping the opener by a 6-to-5 count.

Big Bill Helmer, Cameo's towering right-hander, and Young Leo Ryan hooked up in a pitching duel for full eight innings, but Helmer developed a sore flipper in the ninth and was supplanted by Frank Deavers, who was the winning pitcher in yesterday's afterpiece.

The Bi-Staters won the fast and well played game when "Nebe" George rammed a single to center with the pillows packed.

Lightning Kills Goldun, 1941 Gold Cup Winner

Goldun, 1940 winner of the Virginia Gold Cup, was struck by lightning early Saturday morning on the farm of his owner, Christopher M. Greer, jr., near Upperville, Va., it was learned yesterday.

With another Greer-owned horse, Grumpy, Goldun was turned out on pasture and was standing under a tree to ward off rain when the bolt struck. Both horses were killed.

Va. Amateur Golf Is Won By Hamilton

Hot Springs, Va., July 5 (AP).—Jack Hamilton, young Newport News player who at one time in today's 36-hole finals was 5 down to George Payton, also of Newport News, fired 12 pars and a birdie over the last 13 holes of the match to come from behind and win the Virginia State amateur golf championship, 1 up.

He succeeds Walter Cushman, Charlottesville, last year's winner who is in the Navy and did not defend his crown.

Hamilton, medalist with a 74 in the tournament which opened Thursday, hit booming tee shots—several of them topping 300 yards—well ahead of Payton nearly every time. He lacked Payton's steadiness around the green in the morning round and wound up two down at the halfway mark to Payton, also a finalist in 1941.

Payton won four of the first five holes this afternoon and then was unable to win another before the end of the match.

Payton and Hamilton turned in some of the best golf ever displayed in State tournament finals. Payton had a 75 in the morning, while Hamilton shot a 73. Hamilton had a 1-under-par 35 on the last lap of the afternoon round. He evened the match at the fifteenth with a par 3 when Payton was trapped. He went ahead in the match for the first time since they left the initial hole by scoring a birdie 4 on the sixteenth. They halved the next two holes and it was all over.

Hamilton, who will go into the Coast Guard soon, won his opening match by default from Harman Walker, Newport News, and then ousted Charles Egleston, Camp Lee; Howard Misser, Richmond, and Sam Bates, Norfolk, the 1940 champion.

Service Stars Sharpen Eyes For Big Game

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 5.—Pitchers and catchers of Lieutenant Gordon (Mickey) Cochrane's U. S. all-Service team worked out for two hours here today to prepare for their clash with the all-star champions of the major leagues.

Five pitchers, including Bob Feller and Johnny Rigney, two backstops, an infielder and an outfielder practiced hitting in Cleveland's 81,000-seat Municipal Stadium, where under the floodlights Tuesday they meet winners of the game in New York Monday between all-star American and National League teams.

Lieutenant George Earnshaw, service team coach, said his charges were in excellent shape and anxious for a crack at the big-league champions.

One of the service players, who asked his name not be mentioned, declared, "this is one game we've got to win if we want to live with Cochrane. When it comes to winning, he hasn't changed at all—he's the same old Mickey."

But whoever wins, the armed services will benefit. The all star games in New York and in Cleveland are expected to raise $100,000 for baseball's equipment fund for servicemen and the balance will be divided equally between the Navy Relief Society and the Army Emergency Relief.

In addition, a $1 war stamp will be sold with every ticket for the big show in Cleveland. Already 40,000 reserved seats have been taken.

with an eighth inning double which scored Waner, who had walked. The count was deadlocked at 5-5 when Miller produced his timely blow to give the Braves their first triumph over the Dodgers at Braves field since last August. The victory also was their second in a row over the National League champions, who previously had taken 14 straight games from the Boston club this season and last year.

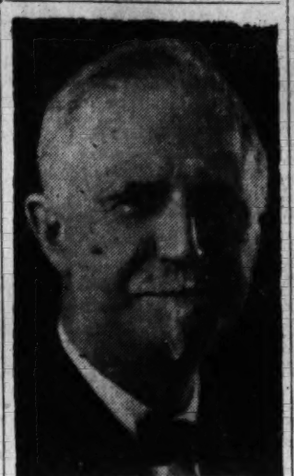
Rising Incomes

By Roger W. Babson

Retail Shops Mainly to Benefit

Industrial employment is at a new all-time high as we pass another Independence Day. Hence, national income should also break all previous records. I estimate for 1942 that this should approximate 117 billion dollars. This is better than a 65% gain over 1939. By national income I mean the income received by the people and not the income of the Federal Government. How it is saved or spent—and particularly the share of it that retailers will get—is of vast importance to all of us



ROGER W. BABSON

Individual checking and savings accounts are rising. This means that funds are accumulating for future purchases. Taxes, of course, are headed sharply upward. Including the purchase of war bonds, for which the Government has asked only 10 per cent of our income, savings and taxes will probably account for about 31 billion dollars of the people's money this year. This would leave some 86 billion dollars for food, clothing, rent, fuel, electricity, and ice; house furnishings, church, benevolences and charities; insurance, miscellaneous items, garbage pail and other forms of waste.

Until Congress decides what form the new income tax bill will take, no one can closely estimate the charge for individual taxes. Some form of monthly payments covering personal income taxes in advance, through deductions from salaries and wages, may lie ahead. This would supplement the present sale of tax anticipation notes.

Luxury taxes, real estate taxes (which may rise as a result of a decline in gasoline taxes if rationing becomes Nation-wide), State, gift, and other forms of taxes surely will take a larger share of income this year than last. However, as the tax outlook is still uncertain, I have considered savings and taxes together in the above estimate.

In my opinion there could be spent in retail shops this year approximately $60,974,000,000. Of this, $24,596,000,000 could go for food and the balance of $36,478,000,000 could be spent in department stores and other retail outlets for all other purchases except food. Churches and charitable gifts should take $5,160,000,000, or 6 per cent of our net income after allowing for all savings and taxes. The balance of some $19,866,000,000 will be split up among the other previously mentioned items of living costs comprising insurance, rent, fuel, electricity and ice.

Many families are properly taking advantage of rising incomes. They are intelligently spending their money. They are paying off mortgages, doctors' and dentists' bills and cleaning up overdue accounts with the garage man, grocer, druggist and other retailers. The decline in installment loans shows that most people are now paying cash for household appliances and personal effects. Receipts of motion picture theaters, restaurants and hotels indicate that people are also getting some enjoyment out of their money.

I was in Washington during all of the last war and have spent some time there since World War II started. Except for the present crazy rush, the scores of new bureaus and the crowded transportation and housing, I cannot see much difference in the place. Politically, Washington remains unchanged and the executive branches of Government have not altered. Washington continues to blow hot and blow cold. It is frightened and panicky one day; bold and optimistic the next day. Its state of mind translated into rules and regulations is clearly reflected in our people.

Except for metal, rubberwares, and radios they can make replacements of general stocks of goods without much difficulty. Substitutes will fill in for many articles which cannot now be manufactured. Retailers can still shop around for new products. Some items—such as 100 per cent woolen goods—if unobtainable here, can be imported from England. Consumers can continue to rely upon their customary sources of supply. A glance at the retail advertisements in your local paper should be sufficient to give a clue to the true picture. If merchants could not restock, would they now be offering goods at bargain prices?

It was not long ago that Washington was forecasting a paper shortage. Boy Scouts and housewives were urged to save every scrap. Now it is found that was unnecessary. Paper today is not as marketable as it was before the war! Remember how we were urged to go easy on cheese "so it could be shipped to the Allies." Now there is a surplus of cheese and we are urged to eat two slices with our apple pie! My guess is that from now on more restrictions will be eased up or entirely removed. Watch for a change in sugar rationing. Supposed shortages may well turn into actual surpluses!

Washington is slapping on ceilings, priorities and restrictions as fast as the regulations can be thought up and printed. Much of this is admittedly necessary, but all of it is not. Of course, labor is not now available to manufacture so many consumers' goods as in peacetime; but the manufacture of many civilian articles will continue. Substitutes will be found for raw and finished materials. Believe me, when I say that most of the consumers' goods industry is going to be protected.

The cost of fuel, electricity, ice, insurance and rent remains about constant in good or bad times and takes about 23.1 per cent of our national income after taxes and savings. The Government is encouraging more to be spent on food this year than ever before, which normally is about 28.6 per cent. Miscellaneous items, house furnishings and clothing take approximately 27.3 per cent, but the latter two percentages do not include the garbage pail and other waste amounting to 15 per cent of the national income. Most of this waste is purchased originally in retail stores.

Thus, 70.9 per cent of the national income, after taxes and savings, is mostly available for retailers. True, the metalwares, automobile lines and a few others must scamper around to offset priorities. However, by far the larger proportion of retailers will not only face a huge public buying power but will also have plenty of goods to sell. Hence, why worry?

Retailers should cheer up! I am not pessimistic over their outlook.

Comdr. Gene Tunney, director of the Navy's physical fitness program; Lieut. Mickey Cochrane and Chief Boatswain's Mate Bob Feller are among the national sports heroes who are to appear with Parks Johnson and Warren Hull when "Vox Pop," which you hear over WJSV at 8, visits Cleveland tonight on the eve of the baseball game between the winners of the big league All-Star contest and the big league stars now in Uncle Sam's service.

In fact, it's likely that there will be more sports notables heard on this venerable quiz show tonight than have ever before been assembled at one time on the air.

The broadcast, in addition, marks two important milestones in "Vox Pop's" career. It will be the beginning of the eighth year on the networks for the show and it will be the beginning of the second year in which "Vox Pop" has been bringing its programs from important military service centers.

While the program was born at KTRH in Houston, Tex., 10 years ago, it didn't go network until two years later, on July 7, 1935, to pioneer in the audience-participation and interview-quiz trend in American radio entertainment.

Again, it was "Vox Pop" which pioneered in taking its microphones to defense and service points, the first broadcast of this type being from the United States Merchant Marine School at New London, Conn., on July 4, 1940. In the meantime, "Vox Pop" has taken its audiences to nearly three score bases, camps, forts and military schools, including West Point and Annapolis.

O. W. Scherger Funeral Set For Tomorrow

Masonic funeral services for Oscar W. Scherger, 39, of 35 Carroll Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., former captain of the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department, who died late Saturday night at Sibley Hospital following an accidental shooting, will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. at the Hines funeral home, Fourteenth and Harvord Streets Northwest. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Scherger

Mr. Scherger, assistant personnel manager of the National Electrical Machine Shops, Inc., where he began as an apprentice 20 years ago, was shot when a youth picked up the pistol of a watchman, who had left it on a table at the shops. The weapon went off and Mr. Scherger was wounded in the abdomen.

Born in Washington, Mr. Scherger lived in Takoma Park for 31 years. He was a charter member of the Volunteer Fire Department and served in 1929 as its captain. A member of the Congress Masonic Lodge, No. 37, he was also a charter member of the Takoma Park Lutheran Church. Active in civilian defense work, Mr. Scherger was air-raid warden for the Sixth Precinct in Takoma Park. He also served as fire marshal for the town for several years.

On Saturdays he worked as an electrical salesman and estimator for Sears Roebuck for the last eight years. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lillian I. Scherger; a daughter, Ruth, 6; his parents, Henry W. and Mrs. Amelia Scherger, and a sister, Miss Bernardine Scherger, with whom he made his home.

Mrs. McConnell's Funeral Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Millie M. McConnell, 70, will be held at the Deal chapel, 4800 Georgia Avenue Northwest, this morning at 11. The Rev. Dr. Charles W. Wood, pastor, Rock Creek Episcopal Church, and the Rev. Dr. George E. Schnabel, pastor, Albright Memorial Evangelical Church, will officiate.

Burial will follow in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mrs. McConnell, wife of J. A. McConnell, retired executive of the Darby Printing Co., died Friday.

The services previously were reported erroneously to be planned for Sunday.

Bridge

No difficulties were noted in the bidding of the following hand to a grand slam at diamonds by Wingate Bixby and George Kennedy at the Eastern championship last April. Skillfully and smoothly they eased into the thirteen-trick contract with no audible sound of shifting of the gears.

They were playing the Kennedy system, in which aces are shown in ranking order, following a two-bid or a cue bid in the opponent's suit.

Here are the cards, with North dealer and East-West vulnerable:

	♠ 10 7 ♡ J 9 ◇ A Q 10 6 3 ♣ A J 8 5
♠ 8 4 ♡ K 7 6 3 2 ◇ 7 5 4 ♣ 9 3 2	NORTH WEST EAST	♠ J 9 6 2 ♡ A Q 10 8 5 4 ◇ 9 ♣ 10 6
	SOUTH ♠ A K Q 5 3 ♡ none ◇ K J 8 2 ♣ K Q 7 6

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	1 ♡	2 ♡	Dble
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	7 ◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

The one-diamond bid showed a five-card suit, without which the Kennedy system calls for an artificial bid of one club. The two-heart overcall asked partner to show aces. Three diamonds indicated the ace of diamonds, and four clubs indicated the ace of clubs. This was all South needed to contract for the grand slam.

Seven is made without effort. All declarer has to do after drawing trumps is to ruff one low spade, and the dummy is high.

N. W. Ditzler, 62, Former Masonry Contractor, Dies

Norman W. Ditzler, 62, Navy Yard employe and former masonary contractor, died early yesterday at his home, 508 Peabody Street Northwest, following a paralytic stroke suffered Wednesday. He had been in ill health for about three months.

A native of Kennett Square, Pa., Mr. Ditzler came to Washington when he was 19 and had resided here ever since. A member of Stansbury Lodge, F. A. A. M., he is survived by his wife, a daughter, Miss Betty Ditzler, who works in the military attache's office of the American legation in Ottawa; two sons, Dr. N. William Ditzler, recently commissioned a first lieutenant in the Army Dental Corps, and John N. Ditzler, 1306 Woodside Parkway, Silver Spring, Md.; a sister, Mrs. Phoebe Davis, Takoma Park, Md., and a brother, Roy Ditzler, Silver Spring.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow in Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth Street Northwest, with burial in George Washington Memorial Park Cemetery.

Mrs. Guy Wonders, 53, Dies; Funeral Services Today

Funeral services for Blanche Pickering Wonders, 53, who died yesterday at her home in Woodley Park Towers, will be held today at noon at the S. H. Hines Funeral Home. Dr. Charles Warner, pastor of St. Alban's Church, will officiate. Burial will follow in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Her husband, Guy Wonders, has been connected here with Warner Brothers Theaters since 1927. Born in Titusville, N. J., in September 1888, Mrs. Wonders had been a resident of the District for the past 12 years.

With her at her death were her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Pickering of Easton, Pa.; her daughter, Mrs. Theda Wonders Porter of this city; a sister, Mrs. Howard B. Hay; a niece, Mrs. Roland House of Easton, Pa., and her husband.

Samuel Motta, Barber, Dies; Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for Samuel Motta, 50, Italian-born barber who had resided in Washington since 1910, will be held at 8 a. m. tomorrow in Sacred Heart Church with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Motta died Saturday following a two-day illness at the home of his brother, Joseph Motta, 1414 Newton Street Northwest. Other survivors include his father, Augostino Motta, and three sisters, Maria, Providencia and Lucia Motta, all of Italy.

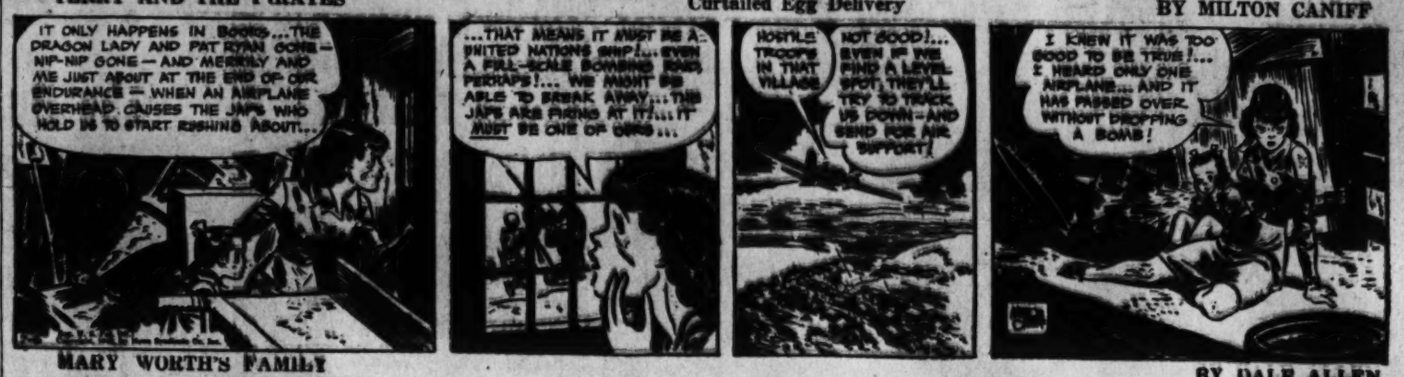
TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Curtailed Egg Delivery — BY MILTON CANIFF



IT ONLY HAPPENS IN BOOKS...THE DRAGON LADY AND PAT RYAN GONE—NIP-NIP GONE—AND MEEKLY AND ME JUST ABOUT AT THE END OF OUR ENDURANCE—WHEN AN AIRPLANE OVERHEAD CAUSES THE JAPS WHO HOLD US TO START RISHING ABOUT...
...THAT MEANS IT MUST BE A UNITED NATION'S SHIP!...EVEN A FULL-SCALE BOMBING RAID PERHAPS!...WE MIGHT BE ABLE TO BREAK AWAY...THE JAPS ARE FIRING AT IT!...IT MUST BE ONE OF OURS...
HOSTILE TROOPS IN THAT VILLAGE
NOT GOOD!...EVEN IF WE FIND A LEVEL SPOT, THEY'LL TRY TO TRACK US DOWN—AND SEND FOR AIR SUPPORT!
I KNEW IT WAS TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE!... I HEARD ONLY ONE AIRPLANE...AND IT HAS PASSED OVER WITHOUT DROPPING A BOMB!

SO YOU THINK YOU'VE DUG UP SOMETHING HOT, EH?
YES, MR. THORNE. I'M PRETTY SURE WE'VE LOCATED THOSE ENEMY AGENTS YOU'VE BEEN LOOKING FOR!
WELL, WELL! ALL OF THEM?
WE THINK SO—THERE'S FOUR OF THEM! THEY HAD A MEETING LAST NIGHT IN A LITTLE TAILOR SHOP DOWN IN THE FINANCIAL DISTRICT!
—AND THE ONE I FOLLOWED TO THE GILTMORE HOTEL MUST BE THE TAILOR! HE LOCKED UP WHEN HE LEFT THE STORE!
YOU'D KNOW HIM IF YOU SAW HIM IN THE STORE?
I'D KNOW HIM ANY PLACE! HE'S HEAVY SET AND—
OKAY! THEN WE'LL GO DOWN AND I'LL TAKE A LOOK AT HIM!

3 Divines Picture World Of Tomorrow

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., July 5.—Religious leaders, speaking tonight at vesper services which opened the University of Virginia's sixteenth Institute of Public Affairs, said the aim of victory should be a postwar world in which there will be a universality of mankind and a devotion to the interests of "the common man."

The vespers, which were sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, was addressed by Father John Cronin, professor of economics at St. Mary's Seminary in Baltimore; the Rev. Beverley M. Boyd, Episcopal rector of Richmond, and Rabbi Abraham Shusterman of Har Sinai Congregation, Baltimore.

Rabbi Shusterman said members of all the faiths had "a task of transcendent importance to do together. It is to rouse all Americans to their religious duty to win, not only the war, but also the peace."

"Wise Men to Rule"

The world of the future peace, Dr. Cronin said, "is to be the world of the common man. Its rulers will be simple men whose skins may be white or brown or yellow or black. There will be Catholics and protestants and Jews in this world, and those who worship their gods in unknown tongues and with a reverence which escapes our eye . . . They will choose wise men to rule them. In simple dignity they will set the terms of their work, bargaining freely with their employers through unions of their own choice. Some will be poor; many must work hard; but none will be slaves.

"The world of tomorrow will be impatient of great visions and grandiose schemes. Rather it will see that true greatness is had only when man is great . . . It will leave these common men to work out their destiny. There will be experts and laws; economic problems will remain complex; but there will be no privileged class, whether it will be the privilege of blood, or party, or wealth . . ."

Religion "on Trial"

Dr. Boyd, pastor of Grace and Holy Trinity Church in Richmond, said religion is on trial today, but that true religion had never been afraid to be on trial. "It is only when religion becomes so encrusted with its own machinery and its ecclesiastical mind is set that it fears a trial."

In times like this, the Virginian declared, "the church can proclaim the Gospel of Jesus Christ as sufficient for the needs and the emergencies of today, and should insist that there is such a thing as universal moral law."

Rabbi Shusterman noted that there once was "dynamic agitation" for prohibition and against America's entrance into the League of Nations, and added:

"One wonders how different and how much further advanced the world would be and how much bloodshed would have been avoided, if the same dynamic power, used by our churches to place prohibition on the statute books, had been used to convince the American people and their elected representatives that religion flowers in world unity and that our most grevious collective sin is the turning of the back on our brethren . . ."

Many Called "Oblivious"

Some preachers today "are still fantically squiring their people on" to lesser goals, "completely oblivious of a number of more important goals," the rabbi said.

"Democracy is weakest in America," he continued, "at the point of contact between white people and Negroes. Here is something to crusade for—unless the Scripture is meaningless, this is a religious crusade, in the name of God and His children. All racial and religious discrimination is a denial of God."

The institute tomorrow will take up America's conversion to war economy as a subject to be considered under the general topic for 1942, "New Strategies for War and Peace."

Headline Speakers Billed

Speakers in the morning and afternoon will include Robert Nathan, planning committee, War Production Board, Washington; Sir Clive Baillieu, British representative on the combined War Materials Board, Washington; Leo M. Cherne, director of the Research Institute of America, New York; Prof. H. W. Weigert, of Trinity College, West Hartford, Conn., and Lieut. William McGovern, U. S. Navy, archeologist and explorer, of Northwestern University.

Dean G. Acheson, Assistant Secretary of State, will speak at 8:15 Monday night in the McIntire Amphitheater.

The institute will continue for only the week this year.

Boom in Suburban Areas Creates Church Shortage

Churches of Arlington County and Alexandria in Virginia are faced with a giant task in meeting the spiritual needs of that area's "boom town" growth, according to the Rev. Albert Rasmussen.

The Rev. Mr. Rasmussen, director of the new department of surveys and church planning of the Washington Federation of Churches, has completed a tentative study of the Arlington and Alexandria sections, and has presented his findings to Protestant clergy there.

The director and Mrs. Rasmussen, also his cartographer, returned last week to Chicago, where he is completing his studies toward a Ph. D. degree. However, the couple will return in September to resume their survey. They spent the month of June getting the new department started.

Mr. Rasmussen last week told the suburban ministers that, according to the "sugar" census, Alexandria has increased 38.9 per cent in population in 19 months, and Arlington 49 per cent in the same period. Those figures do not include several thousand scattered roomers, he added.

Pointedly, he said that the new developments of Arno Valley on South Glebe Road; Park Fairfax, at the northern tip of Alexandria, and Seminary Heights on Seminary Hill, Alexandria, when fully occupied, are expected to bring an additional 21,171 people, or 5,874 new families.

He said that his census indicated that many prospective church members in Arlington and Alexandria are not being reached.

About 22.4 per cent of Alexandrians over 15 years are members of churches there or of 15 leading downtown Washington churches, according to the director's figures. About 15 per cent of Arlington adults over 15 years old are members of churches there or of 15 of Washington's leading downtown churches.

According to Mr. Rasmussen, the clergy of Arlington and Alexandria have an unusually difficult area in which to conduct pastoral work, since a large percentage of the population is of the shifting, confirmed apartment-house type. Studies at the University of Chicago have shown they are the hardest type to win over to the church, Mr. Rasmussen said.

About 1000 Arlington and Alexandria residents are members of the 15 leading downtown Washington churches. About 90 per cent of that number are long-time members of those churches who desired to retain their membership when they moved to the suburbs, according to the survey.

Show Reserved For Service Men

Tonight's performance of "East Lynn," which opened June 25 at the Willard Hotel, will be exclusively for soldiers, sailors and marines based in camps here and nearby, the hotel announced yesterday. Curtain time is 8:45 p. m. in the Willard's main ballroom.

Three hundred service men will be accommodated and free tickets are being distributed today through recreation officers of the various camps. Harry P. Somerville, manager of the Willard, and Richard Midgley, director, producer and villain of the show, arranged the free performance in cooperation with the cast which is donating its services.

Ration Drinkers, Dry Group Asks

The Government yesterday was asked to ration intoxicating beverages and to prohibit the sale and use of them in the armed services "until victory for the cause of liberty and humanity is won."

The request came from the joint conference committee on public relations, claiming to represent more than ten million affiliated Baptists in the United States.

Ballad Singers Make Starlight Debut Tonight

The American Ballad Singers will make their first Washington appearance at 8:30 p. m. today in the Starlight Chamber Music series in Meridian Hill Park. Three centuries of American folk songs will be woven through the program.

Elie Siegmeister, composer and author, will direct the group, and "Ballad of Douglas MacArthur," by Siegmeister, a tribute to the war hero, will be featured.

Included in the program will be "Psalms of the Pilgrims," songs of the earliest settlers, ballads of courting, sea chanties, children's game songs, street cries and folk tunes of present-day America.

The Starlight Chamber Music concerts are sponsored by the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress. Service men in uniform are admitted without charge.

"Keeping the full quality and flavor of folk mood, with all its gayety and informality, the six singers and their director sit at a long table and join together in the good-humored ballads," it was announced. The round-the-table ballad singing, novel to many concert goers today, has a long tradition in this country.

Palestine Jews Calm, Determined, Dr. Goldstein Says

New York, July 5 (AP).—The Jews of Palestine are "calm and determined . . . They will not permit the enemy to pass," Dr. Israel Goldstein, president of the Jewish National Fund, declared today in announcing $100,000 had been cabled to fund headquarters in Jerusalem.

"The Jews of Palestine," he said, "are prepared to give their all in defense of their frontiers. We must do what we can to strengthen their hands.

"We hope that the force of events will persuade Prime Minister Churchill to grant at long last the right of the Jews in Palestine to fight as a Jewish military force under British command in defense of their home and of their soil.

He said that on the basis of Jewry's faith in the future the fund was increasing its Palestine land holdings "and thus helping the United Nations in maintaining not only the Jewish population in Palestine but in providing foodstuffs for the armed forces in the Mediterranean."
